Senate votes to lift Viet embargo

Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Senate, responding to appeals to help heal the last wounds of the Vietnam War, voted overwhelmingly Thursday to recommend that President Clinton lift the trade embargo imposed on the Hanoi government nearly 20 years ago.

The 62-38 vote concluded an impassioned two-day debate, in which one side pleaded for normalization of relations with Vietnam, while the other side urged the administration to wait until the Vietnamese government has accounted more fully for U.S. servicemen missing in Southeast Asia since the war.

Although the resolution is non-binding, it calls on the president to end the embargo "as expeditiously" as possible.

In recent weeks, the White House has signaled that the president was approaching a decision on whether to lift the embargo, but White House spokeswoman Dee Dee Myers said after Thursday's vote that while Clinton welcomed the "Senate's sentiment" on the issue, he had made no final decision.

She said the president wanted to be certain first that the Vietnamese were being fully cooperative on the POW/MIA issue.

The embargo, which has prohibited all trade with Vietnam since the end of the war, has been relaxed slightly in recent months to permit some businesses to make initial forays there. The president has sole authority to lift it by executive order.

Supporters of the Senate recommendation, who included some of the most-decorated Vietnam War veterans in Congress, clearly hoped that the vote would help alleviate some of the political COEUR d'ALENE — Paul Mahar served 406 days in Vietnam, earned a chestful of medals and rose to the rank of sergeant — even though he never enlisted, was never drafted, and was physically unfit to serve.

Now, the Army is taking the extraordinary step of recognizing the service Mahar performed after he assumed the identity of a friend who went AWOL.

The Army's Board for Correction of Military Records said Thursday it will create a file to show Mahar received an honorable discharge and a citation for saving another soldier from drowning while serving in Vietnam in 1966-67.

Mahar assumed the identity of boyhood friend Frank L. Clouse Jr., who was drafted and went through basic training, but failed to go to Vietnam as ordered.

Clouse, who lives near Toms River, N.J., has an unlisted telephone number. Associated Press attempts to contact him for comment have been un-

Snow, ice send 'em skidding

TWIN FALLS – Slick roads from a dusting of snow early Thursday sent Magic Valley drivers skidding and sliding off rural roads and highways, causing numerous accidents – including a fatality near Raft River.

Robert Allen Baker, 28, of Twin Falls, died instantly when his pickup slid into a highway median, rolled once and threw him from the vehicle, Cassia County Sheriff's Department Lt. Jim Higens said.

Baker was eastbound about 8:15 a.m. on Interstate 86 about 26 miles east of Burley when he lost control of his pickup and trailer, Higens said. Baker was not wearing a seat belt and was thrown 80 feet when his vehicle jackknifed into the median.

He died of massive head injuries.

An 8-year-old Burley boy, Dereck Bean, was in stable condition at Cassia Memorial Hospital after being hit by a pickup, driven by Jeremy Dayley, 17, of Burley. Dayley was not cited. Bean probably ran out in front of the vehicle, Higens said.

At least four other accidents were reported in Cassia County on Thursday.

In Minidoka County, eight accidents were reported between 7:34 and 8:40 a.m., a sheriff's department dispatcher said. A three-car pileup left one person slightly injured.

Dispatchers for the Idaho State Police, Twin Falls County sheriff and the Jerome police and sheriff said the worst conditions occurred early Thursday morning. By afternoon roads were wet, but not icy.

Shortly after 8 a.m., a 1992 GMC, driven by 24-year-old Claudia Swanson of Twin Falls, slid off Interstate 84 five miles west of Burley, said an ISP dispatcher.

Swanson was treated and released from Minidoka Memorial Hospital. A passen-

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Congressional Budget Office Director Robert D. Reischauer said Thursday that President Clinton's fiscal policies would result in lower federal budget deficits over the next few years than the nonpartisan agency had predicted a year ago.

Reischauer projected the deficit for the current fiscal year, which ends Sept. 31, would be $223 billion — $68 billion less than he had predicted 12 months ago. The deficit would narrow to $166 billion by fiscal 1996, he said.

"The dramatic improvement since last January is largely the result of the enactment in August of a major package of tax increases and spending cuts" pushed through Congress by the White House, Reischauer told the Senate Budget Committee.

The forecast offers independent backing for the Clinton administration's claims about the effect of its fiscal policies.

Reischauer also offered a bullish forecast for the economy. He said CBO analysts estimate the economy will grow at an annual rate of 3 percent through the end of 1995, with unemployment falling from 6.4 percent to 6.0 percent and inflation remaining below 3 percent.

In the five years to 1999, the CBO expects the economy to accelerate at an average annual rate of 2.6 percent, Reischauer said.

Reischauer agreed Thursday that over the long term, the deficit remains a "significant drag on the standard of living in the United States." According to CBO forecasts, the deficit will begin heading upward again after fiscal 1996, to $365 billion by 2004, driven largely by rising government outlays for Medicare and Medicaid.

This forecast does not take into account the effect of the proposed Clinton health care plan. The president contends that his plan will reduce the deficit by more than $50 billion over the next five years. Critics warn that it will create a broad category of new entitlements that could end up adding billions to federal expenditures.

Skater admits she kept silent about attack

Los Angeles Times

PORTLAND, Ore. — Tears welling in her eyes and lips quivering, Tonya Harding confessed Thursday that she knew about the alleged involvement of people close to her in the attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan after the fact and did not report it to police.

But Harding steadfastly said she was not involved and knew nothing of the assault beforehand.

She pleaded — all but begged — to remain on the U.S. Olympic team.

"I have devoted my entire life to one objective: winning an Olympic gold medal for my country. This is my last chance. I ask only for your understanding."

Concurrently, the U.S. Figure Skating Association announced [illegible] that it [illegible] U.S. [illegible] the team that will compete in the Feb. 12-27 Winter Games in Lillehammer, Norway.

But the USFSA also announced that it has begun a process that could result in her removal from the team by establishing a five-member hearing panel that will meet [illegible] Tuesday and Friday in Colorado Springs, Colo.

Harding

The 23-year-old Harding, the U.S. national women's figure skating champion, [illegible] her long, self-imposed [illegible] the strange case [illegible] ment slowly and [illegible] a Portland athletic club. It ran counter to her previous denials, in which she said she was completely innocent.

On Thursday, Harding expressed sorrow for what happened to Kerrigan and described herself as "embarrassed and ashamed that anyone close to me could be involved."

"I had no prior knowledge of the planned assault on Nancy Kerrigan. I am responsible, however, for failing to report things I learned about the assault when I returned home" on Jan. 10 from the U.S. figure skating championships in Detroit, she said.

"Many of you will be unable to forgive me for that. It will be difficult for me to forgive myself."

Harding gave no accounting of exactly what information she kept secret about the attack, and neither did she identify those close to her who were involved.

As Harding made her confession, her ex-husband, Jeff Gillooly, was across town at the office of the FBI, undergoing his second day of questioning by investigators.

The two have had a stormy, seven-year relationship, including a divorce last August and a reconciliation that was broken off last week just hours before Gillooly, 26, became the fourth man arrested and charged with conspiracy to commit second-degree assault in the case. The crime is a felony that carries a sentence of up to three years in prison.

Reports have been intensifying in the last two days that Harding herself would be charged in the case. The (Portland) Oregonian newspaper said a criminal complaint was "virtually certain." The newspaper said that Harding initially lied to FBI investigators for several hours when questioned last week, saying she knew nothing of the plot.

Weather summary

Light snow and clouds lingered over parts of the state Thursday, with a stubborn low pressure trough bringing clouds, light snow and fog to much of south central and southeastern Idaho in the afternoon.

The north was also under clouds but only Lewiston and Grangeville reported precipitation with light rain, drizzle or snow at times. Most of the snowfall was light with little additional accumulation.

Heaviest amounts were in the southeast in the Pocatello area.

Light snow and rain continued much of the day in the Magic Valley, altough there was apparently little moisture north of the Snake River. About an inch of snow accumulated in the morning before melting off in most places.

The highest temperature in the state Thursday was 53 degrees at Payette. Stanley reported the lowest at 1 degree.

Elsewhere in the nation Thursday, the highest temperature was 85 degrees at Fort Myers, Fla. Crown Point, N.Y., reported the lowest temperature at 48 degrees below zero.

Rain, snow, cold cover East again; new storm on West Coast

The Associated Press

Snow and ice spread from the Plains to the East Coast Thursday, thunderstorms caused flooding in parts of the South and a new storm system moved into California.

Arctic high pressure brought more record cold to the Northeast.

Low pressure moving across Missouri produced snow across parts of the northern Plains, the upper Mississippi Valley and the Great Lakes. Accumulations included 8 inches in northeastern Nebraska, 7 inches in southeastern South Dakota and southern Minnesota, 5 inches in Iowa, and 2 inches in parts of Michigan.

A mixture of snow, sleet and freezing rain caused hazardous driving conditions across the lower Great Lakes, parts of the upper Ohio Valley and through the Appalachians into the central East Coast states.

Ice and freezing rain broke power lines in southeastern Michigan and about 28,000 Detroit Edison Co. customers lost electricity, said spokesman Scott Simons.

As the weather system moves northeastward, winter storm watches were in effect through Friday across southern Vermont, northern New Hampshire and much of Maine.

Moisture from the Gulf of Mexico streamed northward across the western Gulf Coast into the Ohio Valley, producing widespread rain with thunderstorms across eastern Texas, Louisiana and Mississippi.

More than 8 inches of rain fell in sections of Louisiana, causing a freight train derailment and closing schools and roads.

Some flooded homes in Rapides Parish could be reached only by boat. Only one road was open in the downtown area as parish authorities declared a state of emergency and fire houses distributed sandbags.

Hail an inch in diameter was reported in southeastern Texas at Waco, Flatonia and Moulton, the National Weather Service said.

Although rain was not as heavy across the Tennessee and Ohio valleys, there was a threat of flooding from the combination of rain on partially frozen ground and ground saturated by snowmelt.

successful. No decision has been made on charges against him.

Mahar, then 19, was exempted from the draft in 1966 as physically unfit because he had a steel pin in one arm, used to repair a fracture. Ironically, he said the arm was broken while wrestling with Clouse when he was 13.

The buddies plotted to falsify Clouse's military identification, using Mahar's height and weight, and then explain to officers that a mistake had been made and that he should be given a medical discharge.

Mahar, now a 47-year-old unemployed woodworker, said Clouse talked him into the deception.

But the plot backfired. When he reported to Fort Dix, N.J., in Clouse's place, Mahar was placed in a barracks with other AWOL soldiers. Rather than court-martial him, "the path of least resistance was to send me to Vietnam," Mahar said.

Why didn't he stop the charade before boarding the Vietnam-bound plane?

"I was trying to buy time to still make the plan work," Mahar said.

Mahar said he had to learn how to be a soldier quickly by imitating people around him.

"I was really scared I was going to get somebody killed," he said. "But after two months, I belonged there."

The Army records board based its recommendation on dental records, fingerprints and handwriting, as well as Mahar's knowledge of actions by the 2nd Battalion 27th Infantry Regiment, of the 25th Infantry Division near Cu Chi in South Vietnam, said Army spokesman Maj. Bill Buckner.

"While the board does not approve of the deceptive manner in which he initiated his service, it cannot be denied that he served, and that he served well. In fact, considering his lack of formal preparation, his performance as an infantryman in combat was extraordinary," the board wrote in December.

Joyce Weisner, a spokeswoman for the Army Reserve Personnel Records Center at St. Louis, said she had never heard of a similar situation where a service record was created, rather than corrected.

Buckner said military officials are still trying to determine whether either man could be prosecuted for the switch, or whether Mahar is eligible for veteran's benefits.

"I always knew there was a possibility I could be charged, or he could be charged," Mahar said. "But I always knew he would be more in jeopardy than I could have been."

Mahar took his story to the Spokane, Wash., Spokesman-Review six years ago and the paper published a column at that time, outlining his claims. He also began appealing to Idaho congressmen for help in getting recognition of his service.

He also has sent countless letters asking Clouse to go public with the story. Mahar said the last time the two talked was about six years ago, before Clouse got his unlisted phone number.

Mahar said he's not sorry about his military service, and even tried to enlist using his real name about two years after returning from Vietnam; he was rejected because of the pin in his arm.

"I've done something that nobody else did," he said. "I'm not a victim. I'd just like to paint this picture in a little different way."

vulnerability Clinton faces over the highly sensitive issue. He has had less maneuverability on the matter than some other presidents might have had because he evaded the draft during the war and never served in the armed forces — and has been harshly criticized on both counts.

The Senate action on Thursday was met with dismay by veteran's organizations and groups representing the relatives of American servicemen still listed as missing in Southeast Asia.

Noting that the vote fell, coincidentally, on the anniversary of the treaty that ended U.S. involvement in the war, the National League of Families accused the senators of capitulating to pressures from business groups seeking opportunities to trade with Vietnam and to invest in the nation's reconstruction.

"Today, (on) the 21st anniversary of the Paris Accords ... 62 U.S. senators handed Vietnam a major victory and may have irretrievably destroyed answers for POW/MIA families on the fate of their relatives in the bargain," the League said in a statement.

"We are very disappointed," added John Sommer, executive director of the Washington office of the American Legion. "Once the embargo is lifted, Vietnam will have no reason to continue to cooperate" in the effort to account for missing servicemen, he said.

Advocates of normalized relations between the United States and Vietnam rejected those sentiments, however, arguing in sometimes bitter debate on the Senate floor that Hanoi has made significant progress in accounting for the missing servicemen

Furthermore, they said, the best way to resolve the remaining cases is to improve ties with Vietnam and establish a larger U.S. presence there.

Scientists offer new test for Lyme disease

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Scientists say they have developed a new test to determine if joint swelling is caused by Lyme disease, which until now wasn't easy to distinguish from inflammation caused by an immune response.

If a patient has Lyme bacteria, doctors can prescribe with more confidence massive doses of antibiotics, reseachers reported in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The new test, costimg $200, uses a technique that determines whether any genetic material from Lyme disease is present in joint fluid, normally taken from a patient's knee.

ger in the vehicle, whose name was not available, was in stable condition in the hospital Thursday night, a hospital spokeswoman said.

Three other passengers in the car, all of Twin Falls, were uninjured.

Right after this accident, two other cars collided as they slowed to avoid the first wreck, the ISP dispatcher said. But no one was injured.

A third accident happened on I-84 near the Utah border around 9:30 a.m. A car traveling too fast for conditions slid and rolled into the median. No one was injured, the dispatcher said.

Laurie Mauser, 46, of Jerome, ran a stop sign as she exited I-84 and entered West Road. Her car collided head-on with a pickup driven by William Jeffery Wilson, 39, of Buhl.

The Jerome City Fire Department used special equipment to get Mauser out of her car. She was treated and released from Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, according to sheriff's records.

Mauser and Wilson were wearing seat belts. Both vehicles were totaled.

Icy roads apparently caused another head-on accident on I-84 southeast of Jerome. Both vehicles in this accident also were totaled, but both drivers were wearing seat belts and were not injured.

Twin Falls County reported numerous cars sliding off roads into ditches and borrow pits. But no serious accidents were reported, a sheriff's dispatcher said.

'Sheriff Lobo' dies

ALTADENA, Calif. (AP) — Claude Akins, who played genial, rough-and-tumble characters in movies and TV, including sheriff Lobo of "B.J. and The Bear," died Thursday of cancer.

The actor appeared in supporting roles in many classic films, including "From Here to Eternity," "The Caine Mutiny" and "Inherit the Wind."

He died with his family at his side, said his publicist Julian Myers. Film reference books said the actor was born in 1918, making him 75. But his son, Claude Akins, Jr., said he was 67.

New research shows earlier weather predictions were extreme

WASHINGTON (AP) — Warnings that the climate along the north Atlantic could chill abruptly by tens of degrees were a little too dire, new research indicates.

Instead, the earth's climate is remarkably stable, and there is little reason to think that will change, according to a study to be published Friday in the journal Science.

The study "is mollifying what appears to be a rather sensational finding and in some sense a disturbing finding," said Dr. Richard Fairbanks, a senior scientist at Columbia University's Lamont-Doherty Earth Observatory.

Last summer, a group of European scientists found evidence of repeated abrupt coolings in Greenland during the generally warm period before the last ice age. They studied samples of ice that indicated average temperatures in Greenland dropped by 25 degrees Fahrenheit within one or two decades — remarkably quick for climate change.

These chilly periods occurred between 135,000 and 115,000 years ago, when the earth's average temperature was 4 degrees warmer than now.

In a series of articles and talks, the scientists said future global warming could lead to more such temperature drops, with periods of markedly colder climate in countries bordering the north Atlantic. And they urged quick study to find out just what caused these plummeting temperatures.

Fairbanks and a team of researchers from Columbia and the University of California, San Diego, did —and found things not as grim as their European colleagues thought.

The first study assumed all climatic evidence buried in Greenland's ice reflected the country's ancient air temperature. But Fairbanks says those ice samples also show where the snow that fell on Greenland centuries ago originally came from.

That means the ice core samples are not an untainted climatic record. The temperatures they reflect are a mixed bag of ancient temperatures from around the world, Fairbanks explained.

"It would be an overstatement to say the temperature oscillations were only half as much as they concluded, but I think it's on that order," he said. "We find that in the last 9,000 years the climate has been remarkably stable."

Fairbanks' team used a computer model that has proved reliable for forecasting weather to look back at Greenland's history.

Florida system becomes model

WASHINGTON (AP) — In a preview of the president's plan to overhaul the nation's welfare system, the Clinton administration gave Florida permission Thursday to experiment with time-limited benefits and subsidies to employers who hire welfare recipients.

A senior administration official said Florida's demonstration project is significant because it mirrors President Clinton's efforts to expand education, training and child-care for parents on welfare while limiting their benefits to two years.

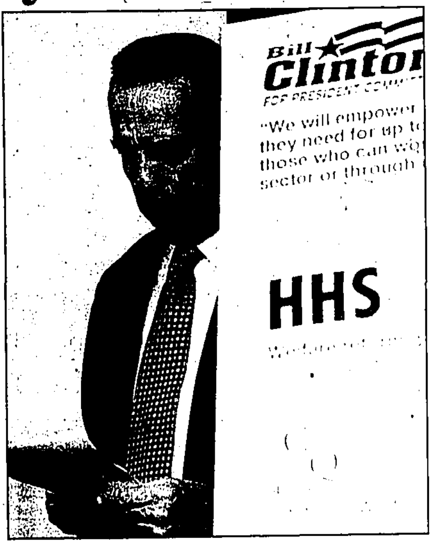
In his State of the Union address Tuesday, Clinton promised to introduce welfare-reform legislation this spring. Although the administration has outlined its plan in broad terms, it has yet to make the tough decisions about costs and financing.

Seventeen Senate Republicans, including Minority Leader Bob Dole, tried to upstage Clinton by introducing their own plan Thursday.

Similar to the House Republicans' bill, the Senate measure would require more welfare recipients to work, limit aid to immigrants, and force unmarried teen-age mothers to live with a parent to qualify for welfare.

In Florida, parents who participate in the demonstration will be allowed to collect welfare for a maximum of 24 months in any five-year period. While on the rolls, parents will be eligible for training, education, child care, health insurance and intensive case management.

The Clinton administration also wants to limit welfare benefits to 24 months over a certain, but still undecided, length of time, the senior administration official said. Its plan will also include counseling, education or training, and help with child care for recipients preparing to leave the rolls.



AP photo

Sen. Bob Dole, R-Kan., the Senate minority leader, announced Thursday a Republican alternative to the White House's plan for welfare reform.

In Florida, the state will guarantee a minimum-wage job — in either the private or public sector — for recipients unable to locate work at the end of 24 months, according to the federal Department of Health and Human Services.

The state will offer incentive payments — 70 percent of the recipient's current benefits for up to one year — to private companies that hire welfare recipients. Employer subsidies will also be an element of the Clinton plan, the administration official said.

"Able-bodied people who want to work will get the chance to work and those who don't want to work will be out the door in two years. Those who truly can't work will be unaffected by this new program," said Jim Towey, secretary of Florida's Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services.

Parents who refuse to comply will lose their share of the family's welfare check. Payments to the children could continue, but only through a third party.

The "Family Transition Program" will operate for eight years in two counties — Alachua and Escambia — beginning next month.

Two hundred welfare families in each county will enrolled during the first 60 days. Other families will added later, but the state says it's too early to say how many will ultimately be affected.

Combined, the two counties have 10,800 families on the rolls of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). As of October, Florida had 254,000 AFDC families statewide.

The experiment required a waiver of federal regulations governing AFDC, a state-federal welfare program that supports 5 million low-income families nationwide, most of them headed by a single mother.

Under Florida's plan, parents in the experiment who leave welfare for work will be given day-care assistance for two years, instead of the usual one year.

Top Justice Department assistant leaves post

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deputy Attorney General Philip Heymann, a veteran of four administrations who served as right-hand man to Janet Reno, resigned unexpectedly Thursday — a move they both attributed to differences in management style and chemistry.

Heymann

And a special assistant to Reno, Lula Rodriguez, who is under Justice Department investigation over alleged vote fraud in a Miami-area election, also resigned, spreading turmoil to the top of a third key Cabinet department.

The sudden moves at Justice followed recent high-level changes at the Defense Department, where the secretary resigned and his proposed replacement withdrew recently, and the State Department, where the No. 2 man left last year.

There has been speculation that Reno herself has fallen from favor in the White House, which President Clinton denied as recently as last week. A special counsel has been named to investigate financial dealings in Arkansas including some by the department's No. 3 official, Webster Hubbell, when he was a law partner to Hillary Rodham Clinton.

Liberal Democrats say health plan can cut costs for 75% of consumers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Liberal Democrats pushing for a Canadian-style, government-financed health care system proposed paying for it Thursday with an 8.4 percent payroll tax on employers and a 2.1 percent levy on individuals' taxable income.

Those taxes would replace private insurance premiums and allow Americans to go to a doctor, fill prescriptions and get hospital and nursing home care without further out-of-pocket payments.

Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash., a lead author of the American Health Security Act, said 75 percent of Americans would wind up paying less for their health care under this system.

The sponsors also proposed a $2-a-pack increase in cigarette taxes and a 50 percent excise tax on handguns and ammunition. They said small employers — those with fewer than 75 workers and making less than $24,000 — would pay a payroll tax of just 4 percent.

Sen. Paul D. Wellstone, D-Minn., said the plan offers "a far more generous package of benefits than any other bill," including the Clinton health plan.

Rep. John Conyers Jr., D-Mich., a coauthor, said, "People can pay insurance companies and get higher costs and more restrictions on care. Or they can pay the government and get administrative simplicity and greater freedom-of-physician choice."

The new payroll tax would be on top of the 7.65 percent levy that employers now pay for Social Security, Medicare and disability insurance.

Workers would pay the 2.1 percent on their taxable income — earnings minus deductions and personal exemptions — rather than their gross income. That tax would hit interest and other investment income — not just wages.

Clinton's health plan would require all employers to pay for private insurance for workers and their families. It would guarantee that the premiums not cost more than 7.9 percent of payroll. In addition, workers would pay a 20 percent share of the premiums. Clinton would also boost the cigarette tax to 99 cents.

Wellstone said the Joint Committee on Taxation has estimated the liberals' plan would raise $1.2 trillion in payroll taxes by 1999, $59 billion in cigarette taxes and $1 billion from the excise tax on guns and ammunition.

It would abolish Medicare and Medicaid and give old and poor people the same health coverage as everyone else. It would leave patients free to choose any doctor, but the government could limit how much states paid health care providers.

An earlier Congressional Budget Office analysis said the single-payer plan could save $114 billion to $175 billion a year by 2003.

Separately, a coalition of consumer, labor and senior groups released a study concluding that American children, including the almost 10 million without health insurance, would fare best under the single-payer bill or the White House plan.

U.S. wants end to bickering over Bosnia

WASHINGTON (AP) — Appealing to France for an end to bickering over Bosnia, Secretary of State Warren Christopher urged U.S. allies Thursday to prepare for NATO military action against the Serbs to relieve two encircled towns in the former Yugoslav republic.

Christopher said the United States was "quite prepared" to implement President Clinton's commitment at the NATO summit meeting in Brussels earlier this month. "I hope we can come together on the importance of carrying out the U.N. and NATO resolutions as well," Christopher said.

France, which has 6,000 peacekeeping troops in the Balkans, has urged the United States to help put pressure on the Muslim-led government to accept terms for an end to the 21-month war.

Packwood will appeal ruling

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Bob Packwood will appeal a court ruling ordering him to provide his diaries to the Senate Ethics Committee, his lawyer said Thursday.

A judge said he would delay transfer of the materials to permit the appeal.

Defense attorney Jacob Stein said he will go to the U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia while the diaries are given to a court-appointed hearing examiner, who in turn will prepare them for the ethics committee.

The ethics panel is investigating Packwood for alleged sexual misconduct, witness intimidation and obstruction of the investigation. It wants the diaries to determine whether to expand the investigation to include job offers to the Oregon Republican's wife by lobbyists and businessmen.

FDA considers chicken pox vaccine

BETHESDA, Md. — A vaccine for chicken pox, long awaited by parents, seemed ready Thursday to move a step closer to market.

An advisory committee to the Food and Drug Administration heard testimony that the vaccine by Merck & Co. has proved safe and effective during almost a decade of clinical trials.

The advisory committee was to recommend whether the FDA should license the vaccine called Varivax. If the committee makes such a recommendation, the vaccine could be in doctors' offices by summer.

Prescription drug sends 9 to hospital

WEIRTON, W.Va. — A teen-ager is believed to have handed out a prescription sedative commonly used on emotionally or mentally disturbed patients, sending nine people to a hospital, authorities say.

An investigation was continuing Thursday, but no charges were filed.

Nine people were admitted Wednesday to Weirton Medical Center after suffering muscle spasms and stiffness in their necks and joints, police Sgt. Ralph Fletcher said. All but two were 18 or younger.

All took haloperidol, which is sold under the brand name Haldol, he said.

North kicks off Senate campaign

NORFOLK, Va. — Iran-Contra figure Oliver North formally launched his U.S. Senate bid Thursday, touting himself as a conservative outsider who will recapture government from the professional politicians.

"You asked me to take back government from the insiders and wheeler-dealers and put it back where it belongs, in your hands," North told about 500 people in a downtown hotel ballroom.

North has been campaigning for months for the seat held by Democrat Charles Robb. He faces former Reagan budget director Jim Miller for the Republican nomination. A state GOP convention will choose the nominee in June.

During the mid-1980s, the former national security aide to President Reagan played a central role in the clandestine sale of arms to Iran and secret efforts to arm Nicaragua's Contra rebels.

Politician hires controversial Rollins

WASHINGTON — Ed Rollins, who created a furor by claiming he schemed to suppress black turnout in the New Jersey gubernatorial election, has agreed to run a black businessman's Senate campaign in Pennsylvania.

Joseph Watkins said Thursday he wanted to hire Rollins despite the controversy because "Ed has a great political background and knows how to win races and I wanted him on my team."

Watkins, 40, is a Philadelphia business consultant and a Baptist minister. He said he will announce his candidacy next Thursday for the Republican nomination for the seat now held by Democratic Sen. Harris Wofford.

Director announces FBI shakeup

WASHINGTON — FBI Director Louis Freeh, declaring "we need fewer agents behind desks," Thursday announced temporary reassignment of 150 headquarters supervisors to investigate crimes around the nation's capital.

He also said he planned later to shift 600 of the FBI's 10,078 agents permanently from supervisory and administrative work to crime-fighting jobs in every state in the union.

He said he acted in Washington first because of budget limitations. He can move 100 agents temporarily to the Washington metropolitan offices and 50 to the Baltimore office, which covers the southern Maryland suburbs of the capital, without paying for transfers. He said the move should be completed in 60 days.

U.S., Israel finalize plans for plane sale

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration has reached agreement on a contract to sell 20 F-15I fighter-bomber planes to Israel, officials said Thursday.

Officials in Washington and Jerusalem said the St. Louis-based McDonnell-Douglas Corp. contract included an option for Israel to purchase five more F-15Is at a later date, but the timetable wasn't known.

Value of the contract was estimated at $2 billion, the officials said.

At the Pentagon, spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said officials expect the sale of the multi-role fighters will be approved by Congress.

The spokeswoman noted that the aircraft being sold to Israel "will be uniquely tailored to meet Israel's requirements," and will be known as the F-15I.

Kevorkian released from house arrest

PONTIAC, Mich. — Two of the three remaining assisted suicide charges against Dr. Jack Kevorkian were dismissed Thursday, freeing him from house arrest.

Oakland County Circuit Judge Jessica Cooper became the third judge to declare Michigan's law banning assisted suicide unconstitutional on various grounds. The previous two rulings, both under appeal, came in neighboring Wayne County.

Assistant Oakland County Prosecutor Errol Shifman said his office also would appeal the dismissals to the state Court of Appeals.

"We believe this law is constitutional and it will be upheld," he said.

Proposed policy attacks chronic drug users

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Clinton administration pitched its domestic agenda to U.S. mayors Thursday, advocating a drug policy that goes after chronic addicts and pledging flexibility in spending federal money on police.

Drug policy director Lee Brown told mayors at the U.S. Conference of Mayors' annual meeting that he opposes legalizing drugs to curb violent crime, and instead will advocate going after hard-core users to eliminate demand that encourages drug dealing.

"We feel that legalization is surrender, and we must never, never, ever, surrender to drugs," Brown said. "Those in our society who have the least will suffer the most."

Brown, head of the Office of National Drug Policy, said the main point of the Clinton administration's drug policy will be breaking chronic drug addiction through treatment.

Hard-core cocaine users, Brown said, make up only 20 percent of all cocaine addicts but consume roughly 80 percent of the cocaine sold on the street.

"These hard-core drug users ... and drug traffickers who service them are at the heart of much of the cities' crime problem," Brown said. "They are directly responsible for the proliferation of guns on our streets. They cause medical and welfare costs to soar."

The administration's policy, to be unveiled in about a week, would expand drug treatment available to the chronically addicted, Brown said. But he dismissed legalization of drugs as an option.

"Just as sure as night follows day, it will lead to more drug use, it will lead to more addiction," Brown said. "We say for those who need help and are addicted to drugs, let's support them. For those who are trafficking in drugs, let's arrest them."

The mayors want Clinton's anti-crime programs to strike a balance between penalizing career criminals and rescuing first offenders from a life of crime.

Attorney General Janet Reno assured the mayors the administration won't exclude treatment and prevention. "It's not an either-or choice," she said.

She also said she would work to get the mayors the flexibility they need in spending federal law-enforcement money. Mayors want to be able to use the funds for overtime, training, vehicles, equipment and support staff.

Many disabled Americans lack coverage

WASHINGTON (AP) — Nearly half the nation's 24 million people with severe disabilities lack private health insurance, the Census Bureau said Thursday in its first comprehensive survey of Americans facing special challenges.

Altogether, 49 million Americans have a disability that keeps them from doing one or more of the common activities of life, such as moving around the home, getting in or out of bed or a chair, bathing, dressing, eating or going to the toilet.

Whether severe or not, a disability lessens the chance of getting private health insurance, the government survey shows.

Forty-three percent of the severely disabled lack private health coverage. So do 34 percent of all Americans with disabilities, severe or otherwise. That's far above the 25 percent of all Americans uncovered by private insurers.

"It amounts to legalized discrimination within the insurance industry," said Linda D. Kild, managing director of the Disability Rights Education and Defense Fund, a law and policy center.

Health-insurance policies that exclude pre-existing conditions or charge higher premiums for people with severe health problems often force the disabled to enter institutions or dispose of their assets so as to qualify for public assistance, she said.

Most of the disabled who lack private coverage get health benefits from the government.

"We're concerned about disabled people as well, and we're trying to work through the president's health reform proposal" said Dan DiFonzo, spokesman for the Health Insurance Association of America, an industry group. "We believe the best change to the system is going to occur when health security is assured to all Americans through this pending law."

Clinton's proposal would require coverage of all Americans regardless of health and pre-existing conditions.

Three out of four severely disabled Americans in their earning years, 21 to 64, don't have jobs, the study said.

"We found that lack of health-care coverage is one of the biggest impairments to people going out to get a job," said John Lancaster, executive assistant to the chairman of the President's Committee on Employment of People With Disabilities.

Crews work overtime to reopen America's busiest freeway

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Look north past a palm tree from the mesa-like brink where Interstate 10 once leaped Fairfax Avenue and you see the Hollywood sign.

To the east, beyond feathery eucalyptus, downtown rises.

Turn south: jets approach Los Angeles International Airport beyond the Baldwin Hills oil fields. To the west looms Century City, with the Fox Plaza tower that was "blown up" in the Bruce Willis action fantasy "Die Hard."

When the all-too-real earthquake closed Interstate 5, California's main north-south truck route, the metaphor in news accounts was a severed umbilical cord.

Here at a collapse of Interstate 10, the Santa Monica Freeway, it was more like a heart attack, a seizure at Los Angeles' core.

Engineers, street cleaners, truckers, surveyors and police have joined the team of hundreds working around the clock to revive America's busiest freeway. Their mission: Demolish failed bridges and build stronger replacements — as soon as possible.

Roy L. Fisher, a senior bridge engineer for the California Department of Transportation, is the on-site boss. Like most of the others, he was pulled away from other duties — in his case, a job adding a second deck to the clogged Harbor Freeway and a 17-month-old baby at home.

Fisher has been working 10-, 12- and 15-hour days, seven days a week, with a zest fed by adrenaline and glee in the chance to make swift decisions and cut red tape — in this early going, at least.

The chatter of jackhammers and groundshaking thuds as chunks of ruined freeway falls clear make it impossible to detect the numerous aftershocks.

"I haven't felt a single one," Fisher says. "My boss called up and said, 'Did you feel that one?' and I said, 'What are you talking about?' "

On this day, Los Angeles street cleaner Ronald Rosamund has one of the mundane tasks. He circles his sweeper, sucking mud and dust away to reveal gouged blacktop beneath where a collapsed bridge has been cleared away.

"You can't see the traffic lines," he explains. "After we get this cleaned up, they can come in and paint new ones."

California Highway Patrol Officer Tony Rodriguez sits in his idled squad car for hours, guarding the empty freeway near where it shears off. A black bar across his badge honors Clarence Wayne Dean, the motorcycle cop who sailed off another ruined freeway to his death while rushing to work after the Jan. 17 quake.

Rodriguez drew earlier quake duty in Santa Clarita, a suburb beyond the I-5 closure, trying to keep irate commuters from trying back-road detours. They cursed him behind his back, he suspects, but at least there was human contact.

On the road below Rodriguez strides Willie A. Thomas, whose T-shirt and orange vest stretch tight across his barrel chest. His five-employee Thomas Land Clearing was hired to help with demolition. The contract for Thomas, who is black, was part of an effort to comply with minority-contracting requirements.

His tiny business had $450,000 in revenue in 1992, then $900,000 last year. The April 1992 riots and last fall's wildfires helped boost those totals.

"I hate it that the earthquake came," he says. "But since it came, I kind of started the year off right financially."

The collapse of the two huge bridges closed four major streets underneath: Fairfax Avenue, and Venice, Washington and La Cienega boulevards.

Though the disabled stretch is only a mile long, detours were 3½ miles for motorists driving alone and nearly two miles for car-poolers, who have a special lane designated for them. The Santa Monica supported 290,000 car and truck trips daily before the quake.

Quake may signal long-term shift to public transportation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Transportation Secretary Federico Pena said Thursday Southern California's car-loving commuters will have to rely on public transportation long after earthquake-damaged freeways are repaired.

Pena told the Senate Environment and Public Works Committee that the long-term plan to rebuild the Los Angeles area's transportation network will include efforts to get as many people as possible to park their cars.

"We are asking the people to reconsider their transportation's alternatives," Pena said. "We ask that people get out of their cars and use transit systems, buses, and Metrolink commuter rail."

Thousands of people are already cooperating. Ridership on the Metrolink system jumped from about 1,000 per day before the quake to as many as 30,000 a day last week.

Pena told the committee it would take six months to a year to rebuild damaged highways, which he called a vital link in "restoring the flow of commerce from the Pacific Coast to the rest of the nation."

Pena also called for quick approval of President Clinton's request for additional federal disaster aid.

Clinton is asking Congress for an additional $6.2 billion to help pay the estimated $7.5 billion federal share of the recovery effort. Nearly $4 billion would go to the Federal Emergency Management Agency, which provides money for temporary housing and other aid, and $1.4 billion more is earmarked for highway repairs.

Politicians latch onto uprising

Dallas Morning News

MEXICO CITY — Rafael Aguilar, an obscure presidential candidate, thought he'd score big by declaring that his political party was the "peaceful arm" of the rebel movement in southeastern Mexico.

No way, the rebels quickly replied. He's not one of us.

Undeterred, Aguilar is organizing a protest march, complaining that the rebels are getting entirely too much attention.

He's not the only one trying to turn the uprising to his political advantage. All over Mexico City, politicians are looking for ways to profit from the rebellion that erupted New Year's Day in the impoverished state of Chiapas.

Leaders of Mexico's two main opposition parties, the leftist Democratic Revolutionary Party and the right-wing National Action Party, have voiced sympathy with the rebels.

Cuauhtemoc Cardenas, the Democratic Revolutionary Party's presidential candidate, said the Chiapas revolt exposed "the falseness of the supposed modernization" carried out by Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari. He warned there would be problems if there was electoral fraud in the Aug. 21 presidential elections.

"I don't call for violence, but if they don't respect the vote, there could be an insurrection more serious than the one in Chiapas," Cardenas said last week.

Cardenas, son of the late Mexican President Lazaro Cardenas, was narrowly defeated for president in 1988 by Salinas amid charges of fraud.

"The people won't put up with another hoax," Cardenas said. "Misery, marginalization, abuse of power, corruption and fraud are common evils in Mexico. We should correct the causes if we don't want more insurrections."

Diego Fernandez de Cevallos, the National Action Party's presidential candidate, also warned of trouble.

"Not having clean elections could present grave problems," he said.

His spokesman, Alberto Loyala, blames Salinas, saying the president neglected domestic needs while pursuing free trade with the United States. Now, he said, the Mexican government needs to bring social justice to Chiapas, rescuing land-starved Indians "who are practically living in slavery."

"It's a profound problem," he said. "You can't just take some aspirin and watch it go away."

Political analysts say it is too early to determine what effect opposition parties' political maneuvering will have on the elections. But they say the impact is certain to be profound because of the uprising's unprecedented nature.

"It isn't possible to think that the presidential campaign will be the same," said Gabriel Szekely, a political scientist at the Center for U.S.-Mexico Studies at the University of California at San Diego. "From here on out, everything has changed. This has even been a surprise for the opposition parties. They've been overcome by these developments."

Lithuania signs NATO pact

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Lithuania signed up for NATO's partnership plan Thursday, becoming the first former Soviet republic to embrace a deal that offers cooperation to former foes while denying them full membership.

Before signing the document at NATO headquarters, President Algirdas Brazauskas told ambassadors of the 16 NATO nations that Lithuania eventually plans to join the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

That aim could upset Russia, Lithuania's neighbor and former ruler.

Moscow opposes any eastward expansion of the Western military alliance and reacted with alarm this month when Lithuania became the first of its former Warsaw Pact satellites to formally apply for NATO membership.

Lithuania became the second former Warsaw Pact state to accept the limited NATO offer. Romania signed up Wednesday. Poland and Estonia are expected to do similar next week, followed by other eastern European nations.

The program, proposed by the United States, allows east European nations to join NATO in military exercises, peacekeeping operations and other activities. But it does not grant them membership or security guarantees, particularly that an attack against one member is considered an attack against all.

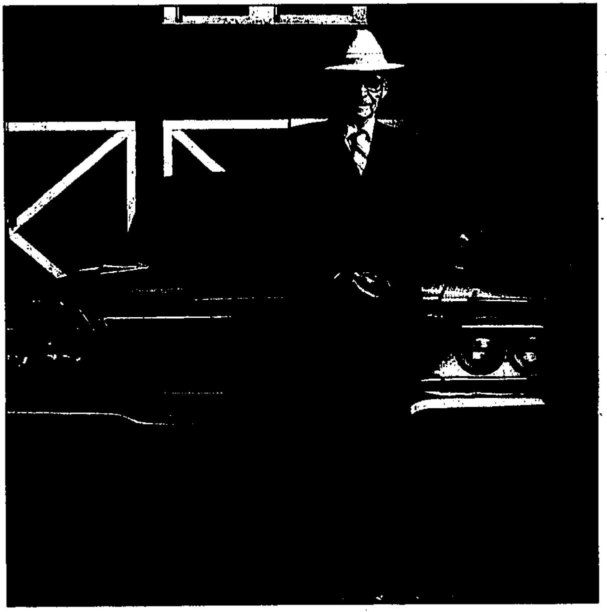
It's only human nature to resist change.



Progress is oftentimes difficult for us humans to accept. The old ways of doing things seem to work fine.

When the automobile came along, most of us wondered what the heck was wrong with the horse.

When man learned to fly, there were those of us who refused to admit that air travel was a reality.

Time is running out for mighty tobacco lobby

Whether they know it or not, smokers and the folk who supply their suicidal habit are playing a political end game.

In Boise, health organizations are proposing a 50-cent increase in Idaho's cigarette tax. (From the current 18 cents a pack to 68 – enough to improve the appeal of cold turkey.)

In Salt Lake City, Utah's Legislature is debating a ban on smoking in public places.

Meanwhile, in the nation's capital, the tobacco lobby is whining about the president's plan to finance his health-care package with "sin taxes." Tobacco growers and cigarette companies warn that a tax increase will decrease demand for their product and spread economic hardship across the Southeast.

The tobacco lobby may still have the strength to win these skirmishes. No matter. Those who produce and consume tobacco cannot resist forever the relentless advance of public awareness.

As of this week, 30 years have passed since the U.S. surgeon general began publicizing tobacco's dangers. Rare is the American who has not heard about the hundreds of thousands killed by the insidious leaf every year.

Rare also is the American who does not understand how tobacco-related ailments drive up the nation's medical costs and insurance premiums.

And rare is the American who has not heard about the dangers of "second-hand smoke."

In years to come, smokers will see their filthy habit become unwelcome in more and more places, and they will find increasing national reluctance to subsidize their self-inflicted medical costs.

Likewise, those who grow and process tobacco will find little sympathy for any economic hardship they may suffer because of declining sales.

Certainly the tobacco lobby will fight, just as the Luddite movement of 19th-century England fought against machinery that eliminated hand labor. But, just as the Luddites inevitably failed, so must the tobacco lobby lose its rearguard struggle.

A smart smoker will quit now. A smart tobacco farmer will look for another crop.

Grazing beneficial to land

First I would like to remind everyone that Idaho is made up of approximately 67 percent public lands.

If Jon Marvel and his associates have their way and force the livestock, timber interests and other public land users off the public lands, it will force a dramatic change in how the economy of county and state government will be funded.

Closing out these interests on public lands shuts down the value-added aspects of the economy and shrinks the tax base accordingly.

There is one consideration on the upside and that is the Bureau of Land Management and Forest Service will need to hire more firefighters to take care of the public lands.

With the added tinder (old grass) that will build up after the livestock are gone, combined with the summer lightning storms that we always get, the extra firefighters will certainly be needed unless it's decided to let the range burn as was done in Yellowstone.

It has not been disputed that the public and private range land in general is in much better condition that it was 75 to 100 years ago, so it seems quite ridiculous to allow a situation such as Jon Marvel is promoting to exist.

When you look at this from an economic trade-off and studying all the facts that have been presented by myself and others, such as Dave Fullmer on June 23, surely we Idaho citizens will not allow Jon Marvel's plan to become a reality.

One other point I would like to make is in regard to the bitterbrush, which is a prime winter feed source for our elk and deer.

A number of years ago, a range biologist reported that for bitterbrush to prosper and grow it needs to be pruned annually. In his report he stated that the only animal that will accomplish this is a beef cow.

Don't forget about the range fires that occurred a few months ago in California and our own beautiful Blaine County with its lovely homes.

I ask our legislators and Land Board to consider all these facts.

Range threatens wildlife

I have been watching with much interest the pros and cons on the proposed bombing range. I, for one, am against it.

I know to most people it looks like a vast expanse of sagebrush and hills, but if one would take the time to go look, you would find a completely different picture. I have hunted in this area where they want to put this range, and I am here to tell you there is plenty of game out there. This is one of the few places the sagehen still exists, so how long do you think they would last if this went in.

Sonic booms are like thunder and dynamite blasts. When eggs are about ready to hatch and a blast of this magnitude goes off, it kills life in the egg. Did you ever hear pheasant roosters crow when they have heard a sonic boom or a dynamite blast goes off? Domestic chickens do the same, for they know it is dangerous to the unborn chicks. Also, just a few years ago, there was a great move to set aside an area down in that part of the country for birds of prey. Well, they are just starting to get established, so how long do you think they will last after this range goes in? I have also trucked many loads of sheep out of this desert waste, and I know several cow outfits out there, so you see, it is good for more than bombing and tearing up.

I don't know how many of you saw the piece in The Times-News just a few weeks ago about the pilots in Nevada saying they would come up here and practice on a range like this. Just 20-minute flying time is nothing to those guys, and just think what that would do to the sonic boom mess.

I have pruned fruit trees down in the Snake River Canyon north of Filer for several years, and I have seen some of those jets streaking down the canyon below the top of the rim. Now if you don't think that makes some noise, just try it. At one time, there were two of them together. You get a range like that out there, and these guys that fly those planes are mostly city dudes and most have never seen the West. They will go everywhere just to see the country and raise a little hell. They don't care what we put up with.

This would devastate wildlife and many family ranches alike, so let's look twice before we allow something like this. I have been in southern Idaho since 1949, and I would hate to see it messed up anymore.

Report needs to be corrected

This letter is to clarify and set straight the record regarding an incident on Dec. 13 which occurred in Lincoln Courts.

An article in the local weekly paper said I was backing down a wide sidewalk toward Locust Street, in which case I would have had to be backing north on 13th Street. However, I wasn't on 13th Street at all. I was backing out of the 100-foot wide driveway labeled "Police, Quick Response and Maintenance." This driveway is used by Frank Lintz in 123B to gain access to his parking pad.

It has also been used by a number of people who visit Frank Lintz and bring things to him and unload them at his apartment; also by people who, as I have done several times, come and load Frank Lintz to take him somewhere.

I was still about 20 feet from the sidewalk, backing eastward toward 13th when impact with a pedestrian was made. The vehicle was backing at idle speed of the motor, and as to who struck whom is questionable.

There is a group of people that has used vicious tactics in an action to smear me for something for which I don't know the reason. Needless to say, if this continues, a court action will occur. If I have done something wrong, these people who don't have the intestinal fortitude to face me with their complaint can then explain their actions in court.

I'm a very easy person to get along with, but when someone steps on my toes, I don't run; I fight back, which I intend to do, and I'm no novice in so doing.

After all, this is supposed to be a free country, and actions such as these need not be tolerated.

Problems mirror mystery of relationships

Sabine Reichel

No matter how much we try to cover it up, the truth is this: The relationship between men and women is dark, irrational and turbulent, defined by ambivalence and laced with underlying hatred. Unexpressed violence is a part of this archaic and basically primitive relationship.

Sex and its seductive and urgent powers are not about fairness, niceness and equality – the homicide squad can tell you that.

Lorena Bobbitt was abused, no doubt, and yet she stuck around. When she realized that she had married an abusive roughneck, she sought a restraining order but failed to show up to complete the paperwork.

Ignoring the obvious warning signs, women marry violent alcoholics (they are sure they'll cure him with "love") and are surprised when they are repeatedly beaten or raped. Is it hope or stupidity that numbs women's perception?

As long as women write sentimental love letters to serial killers in prison, pine away for Mike Tyson, marry Donald Trump and willingly have sex with Joey Buttafuoco, the future looks grim.

The whole issue of sexual harassment, date rape and so on is really also just a symbol for the unresolvable conflicts between men and women. It is loaded with hypocrisy, convenient female-underdog fairy tales and, above all, rage and confusion.

I believe women have run out of excuses for their own inept, irresponsible behavior. The term "victim" has been misused until it has lost its punch, which is unfortunate for the real victims. Lorena Bobbitt is not one of them.

We are indeed responsible for whom we marry, whom we allow to influence and inspire us, share our beds, our fears and intimate thoughts.

The times when parents sold their daughters for a couple of cows are over. Most women can pick whom they want, be what they want, do what they want, when and how they want it. If they wind up with a jerk, a woman-hater, a philandering Mama's boy or a sadistic two-timer, it's because that's what they chose; it's their own fault.

There is a resemblance between Mrs. Buttafuoco and Mrs. Bobbitt. Both married heels and losers and both knew it. While Mrs. Buttafuoco turned to heroic masochism by taking Amy Fisher's "bullet of love" and sticking with her sleazy husband, Mrs. Bobbitt turned to sadistic retaliation and took a knife.

If one looks at the many wives who tried to rid themselves of husbands through violence and murder, what comes to mind is that they deserved each other fully: Men and women are partners in crime and they torture each other with a gender-specific arsenal of weapons that cut, slice, wound and scar.

The Bobbitts are a sordid, unsavory couple, the kind I can't stand but see too often, who lived in a sadomasochistic marriage both consented to. These wives are the mentally lazy, disinterested women who are trapped and bored and angry, not because they are victims but because they prefer having a man around to living at their own risk.

We are as far from male-female friendship, equality and understanding as we've ever been, and the mere act of marriage can't turn that around.

Maybe conventional marriage means having unwanted sex sometimes as much as having unwanted conversations, unwanted confrontations — in short, unwanted company. It's no fun and it's not right but it's what happens when two sexes live under one roof.

Nobody married needs the extra agony of going to sleep and not knowing which parts might be missing the next morning, tossed along the roadside. In a lot of marriages, the knowledge that something important is already missing is painful enough.

Post office has requested cup

A lady came into the Twin Falls Post Office before Christmas who had previously purchased a cup for her husband about a year ago and wanted to buy him another one because he had broke his. (It was his favorite.)

We explained we no longer have cups for sale and she left, disappointed. After some searching we've located one. If you will please come in and talk to Mick and describe the picture on the cup, once again your husband will have his favorite cup.

Spend surplus on our schools

I wish to address your Jan. 23 editorial concerning surplus state revenues. Your statement that "Idaho's leaders have a rare opportunity this year to spruce up the state's national image," is very true. However, I strongly disagree with your means to this end.

You focus on using some of the $80 million cash surplus as a "small cash rebate" to taxpayers. The is not to alleviate taxation but to use a media ploy to buy "national publicity." This approach is not what is best for Idaho.

Idaho has one of the fastest-growing economies in the nation, a fact broadcast by various news media. Idaho's economy is selling itself right now and is attractive to new businesses. However, some of the most-asked questions by people relocating to this area center around schools, health care and community services. The revenue surplus of this year and the projected increased revenues of the next need to be used to enhance these services, including salaries.

Recently, The Times-News published an article showing the Idaho tax burden slightly above the national average. In contrast, Idaho's per pupil expenditure and average teacher's salary rank near the bottom in the nation, and the Magic Valley's are the lowest in the state. The image this creates of Idaho is a place where education is not a priority.

In addition, the state's Idaho School Profiles booklet shows that almost 20 percent of Idaho's elementary teachers have more than 21 years experience, as do more than 25 percent of the secondary teachers. This is significant for several reasons. First of all, many teachers are well past the point of receiving incremental raises and, due to increases in retirement and health coverage, actually take home less money now than several years ago. Secondly, many are approaching retirement age. How is the state going to attract high-quality educators to fill these positions, in addition to staffing the new schools being built to handle the expanding population?

We do not need to send a message that the Idaho Legislature is so frugal that it can give a tax rebate while public services suffer. This state should be focusing on making Idaho's public services, including education, the best possible. That is the message I would like to see in the Wall Street Journal and broadcast by Paul Harvey.

The plea we need to make to the Legislature is to use our economic growth of today to invest in the future of our children.

Living in a cave: 'They've forced us back 100 years in time'

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Like the mice that scurry underfoot, the cave dwellers navigate nimbly through the darkness.

Their blackness is broken by the glow of a small candle fashioned from string and a container of motor oil. Their silence is broken by an occasional newscast from a radio hooked up to an old car battery.

They are the inhabitants of what was once a cozy cafe built in a cave near the Miljacka River, where water cascades in a lulling rush, an Austrian empire-era fort stands majestically over Sarajevo and a mosque's minaret pierces the sky. And it is where Serb gunners rain down terror.

Even by wartime standards, conditions at the Kafe Toplik are bleak: no electricity, heat or running water.

But it's home for 26 Serbs, Croats and Muslims with nowhere else to go.

"They've forced us back 100 years in time," said Vezira Livnjak, 63.

Aid officials say war has made nearly one-third of Sarajevo's 380,000 residents refugees in their own city, forcing them to live in degrading conditions, often in makeshift homes.

Shortly after war started 21 months ago, Mrs. Livnjak and her husband fled to the safety of the cave from their apartment in what is now a Serb-held neighborhood just a five-minute drive away.

"We are living in constant darkness, in an unending night, and slowly we are losing our sight," said her husband, Kasim, a 64-year-old retired electrical engineer.

"I never thought that when I used to come here to drink coffee that one day I would live here," said Salih Torlak, 62. "But then again, I never thought the (former Yugoslav army) would shell us."

Sarajevo teacher Bahra Kafadarevic is one of about 26 displaced Sarajevans living in a cave near the Bosnian capital. Kafadarevic's home was destroyed by Serbian shells.

In the beam of a flashlight, plastic ferns draped with cobwebs and red tinsel from a forgotten celebration hang in the corners of the musty, cross-shaped cafe. Four pool tables are now beds, prized for warmth and protection from rats. There are a few camping cots, but most sleep on the floor.

Along the walls, wool blankets are piled high next to empty soda bottles used to hold water and plastic bags filled with clothes and family histories. The coat-check room is now a tiny bedroom and a place to hang dirty, dank clothes.

At first, Livnjak said, 200 Sarajevans sought refuge here. Almost all have since found other accommodations. Some of them, like the two who stepped out for air last March just as a mortar bomb landed, are dead.

With their son in the army and their daughter in an already overcrowded apartment, the Livnjaks chose to stay in the cave. Nine months ago the Bosnian government offered them another place, but Livnjak said it was merely a cramped basement laundry room.

Braco Avdic, 59, whose apartment is still intact, visits the cave almost daily and spends every other night in its womb.

"It's some form of therapy. I feel safer here," he said.

The cave dwellers survive on twice-monthly rations from the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees. About three months ago, after discovering them, the agency started special monthly deliveries of milk and crackers.

They cook on a stove made from a lard can. Despite a makeshift chimney of smaller cans, they must use it outside because there is no place to vent the smoke.

Most of the cave people spend their days venturing out in search of food. At night they compare notes about who found what, where and at what price.

Then they crawl beneath their blankets in the darkness, secure in the knowledge that they are at least safe from shells in a cave also once used for shelter during World War II.

Kafe Toplik is a microcosm of Sarajevo. It's residents include six Serbs, seven Croats and 13 Slavic Muslims.

"For all of this, what is happening, extremists are guilty," said Livnjak, a Muslim. "This is not a civil war. This is not a religious war. Still today, I have Serb and Croat friends."

Japanese can't reach agreement

TOKYO (AP) — Negotiators from the two houses of Parliament abandoned efforts to compromise on anti-corruption reforms, throwing Japanese politics into deeper turmoil Thursday night.

Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa, who has staked his administration on passage of the reforms, said earlier in the day that he is ready to quit if the reforms fail.

"If I cannot deliver on my promise of political reform, I will not insist on the post of prime minister," he said.

Hosokawa said failure to enact reforms would doom five years of effort and would make "the loss of confidence in Japan's party politics complete, and Japan would lose the trust of the international community."

If Hosokawa resigned, he would become the third prime minister in five years to do so over failure to reform a scandal-tainted political system that has voters growing increasingly angry.

The deadlock over reforms also has prevented Hosokawa's government from putting together a stimulus package for Japan's stagnant economy and distracted it from trade talks with the United States that face a Feb. 11 deadline.

Pessimism in the business community led to more selling on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, where the Nikkei Stock Average fell 1.3 percent Thursday.

With the Parliament session ending Saturday, the committee of 10 lawmakers from each house was unable to narrow differences over how legislators should be elected and whether they should receive corporate donations, chairman Yuichi Ichikawa said.

Court dismisses fundamentalist divorce lawsuit

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — A court ruled Thursday that an Egyptian professor does not have to divorce his wife even though Muslim fundamentalists think he should.

Seven Muslim fundamentalist lawyers filed suit to try to force the divorce, claiming Nasr Abu Zeid's writings as a professor of Arabic literature made him a heretic who could not remain married to a Muslim woman.

Abu Zeid and his wife, a professor of French, opposed the suit. They said they were in love and wanted to remain married.

On Thursday, Mohammed Ahmed Awadallah, a civil affairs court judge, turned down the suit on grounds that the plaintiffs had no direct interest in the case. His legal opinion explaining the verdict was to be released in a few days.

Egyptian intellectuals, already deeply concerned about fundamentalists' threats, had watched the case closely.

Abdullah Khalil, one of Abu Zeid's lawyers and a member of the Egyptian Organization for Human Rights, said intellectuals felt it was "a personal threat against all of them."

Secularists compared Abu Zeid's case to the 1992 killing of Egyptian writer Farag Foda, an outspoken critic of fundamentalist pressure for an Islamic state. Extremist religious leaders had issued a religious decree declaring Foda an apostate, in effect giving radicals a licence to murder him.

Maria Kotova places flowers on the grave of the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier to commemorate the siege of Leningrad, now called St. Petersburg, Russia. Kotova was 3 when her mother starved to death during the siege and she was evacuated from the city.

Yeltsin, city honor fallen on anniversary of Nazi siege

ST. PETERSBURG, Russia (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin honored the veterans and victims of the Nazi siege of Leningrad on Thursday, the 50th anniversary of the siege's lifting.

"I couldn't fail to be with Leningraders today," Yeltsin said on arriving in the city. The anniversary, he said, is "a holiday with tears."

Yeltsin brushed away his own tears as soldiers laid a wreath at Piskaryovskoye Memorial Cemetery for victims of the 900-day siege.

At least 800,000 people died of hunger and cold during the blockade after German troops circled Russia's second largest city.

"No other city has gone through what Leningrad and Leningraders suffered," Yeltsin said. "Glory to the veterans who won this victory, and eternal memory to those who were killed."

The anniversary dominated newspapers across Russia. Some criticized the government for doing too little for survivors, many of whom are struggling to get by on small pensions.

"Veterans of the battle of Leningrad and Leningraders who lived through the siege do not look, to our great shame, like victors decorated with laurels," wrote the military newspaper Krasnaya Zvezda, or Red Star.

"The state and society are not very lavish with signs of attention to them."

There are an estimated 400,000 siege survivors in St. Petersburg, now a city of 5 million. The city took back its czarist name in 1991.

The government gave survivors 10,000 to 15,000 rubles — $6.50 to $10 — to mark the anniversary. The federal and state governments spent about $3 million on the celebration.

Yeltsin announced that a statue of Marshal Georgy Zhukov, who led the Soviet armed forces in World War II and lifted the siege of Leningrad, would be built on Moscow's Red Sqaure.

Yeltsin also visited the village of Maryino, north of St. Petersburg, where the Red Army first broke the siege. More than 150,000 Soviet soldiers were killed in a week of fighting on a tiny bridgehead at the Neva River.

In a tent near the bridgehead site, Yeltsin sampled a typical soldier's meal of canned beef and hot tea, then toasted veterans and survivors with vodka.

Prisoners say trade, rights must be linked

BEIJING (AP) — The two godfathers of China's democracy movement make their point with a certain authority: They know Western pressure advances human rights in China — it got them out of prison.

Wei Jingsheng and Xu Wenli, who topped the list of prominent Chinese political prisoners for more than a decade, say they're Exhibits A and B in this year's debate in Washington over how to deal with China.

Using trade to wring human rights concessions out of China "may not be the best method, but it's what the United States chose," Wei said. "If you retreat, you lose."

They're articulate and savvy exhibits, especially Wei, who arrived for a joint interview at Xu's home with his own translator.

The soft-spoken Xu put a tape recorder on the table and turned it on. Nothing personal, but misquotes could get him in trouble with the police, he said.

Any suspicion that the media-wise pair actually spent the last dozen years in politics, instead of jail, vanishes when they laugh: there's barely a full set of teeth between them.

Xu, 50, and Wei, 43, were leading advocates of democratic reform in 1979-80, cranking out home-mimeographed journals of political essays. Wei was arrested in 1979, Xu in 1981; both were sentenced to 15 years.

Xu was released last May, as Washington debated for the fourth year whether to cancel China's most-favored nation trade status as punishment for suppressing dissent. Loss of normal trade status would sharply raise tariffs on Chinese exports to the United States, effectively shutting them out of their largest market.

Wei was freed in September, 10 days before the International Olympic Committee voted on Beijing's bid to hold the 2000 Olympic Games.

China lost the Olympic bid, but kept its MFN status for another year.

Now, as the U.S. government again debates what to do about MFN, Xu and Wei said they hope Washington will be tough.

The pressure on the U.S. government to play down human rights is strong this year. China is wooing American companies with the prospect of rich contracts if MFN stays in place. Some China scholars in the United States say the annual MFN battle is too bruising and that quiet diplomacy is more effective.

A growing chorus — including U.S. Ambassador Stapleton Roy — says China has already made big human rights improvements.

Wei, who isn't free to travel or find work, responded angrily.

"It's certainly not true that now is the best time in Chinese history. Many Chinese are disgusted with what your ambassador said."

Xu said he was alarmed by U.S. Treasury Secretary Lloyd Bentsen's hints that the United States might make China's MFN status permanent, eliminating the annual pressure for human rights improvements, if China makes significant concessions this year.

"That would be very bad," Xu said. "If today they release two or three people, tomorrow they can arrest four or five more."

"Very convenient!" Wei cut in. "The United States should wait for China to make human rights improvements a long-term thing, and then gradually lift sanctions."

1994 Idaho Legislature

BOISE (AP) — Students in Idaho alternative high schools think regular classrooms are boring and don't really teach the things teen-agers need to enter the job market.

They like alternative schools, with much more attention from teachers, small class sizes and a feeling of "family."

Those were some of the sentiments expressed to a legislative committee on Thursday, part of an experiment to use the statewide public television system to carry legislative proceedings in Boise to the rest of the state.

House Speaker Michael Simpson, R-Blackfoot, wants more of it.

"It will extend the legislative process, give people outside the city of Boise a chance to take part in that process," Simpson said.

Afterward, Simpson said he hoped to equip a room in the Capitol Mall for two-way television links with other parts of the state.

The 1993 Legislature held the first two-way hearing, with lawmakers in Boise connected with a classroom in Pocatello.

Thursday's project was to include links with seven locations, with students from alternative schools telling lawmakers what they thought needed to be changed about the regular education system.

Eventually, lawmakers heard from students in Coeur d'Alene, Boise, Idaho Falls, Pocatello and Twin Falls. A mixup in arrangements caused the Lewiston and Moscow sites to drop out, but students in other areas had plenty to say.

Students at alternative schools have experienced discipline, academic or truancy problems at mainstream public schools. Some are pregnant or have children.

Black

Students from Project Coeur d'Alene and New Visions Alternative High School at Post Falls said they wanted more computers and better programs. But they liked the personal attention they get from teachers in alternative school programs.

"The students feel closer to the teachers because it is a small school," said Fred Snow, counselor at the Nampa alternative high school.

Several students said they liked "hands on" projects rather than simply having a teacher lecture out of a textbook. And they liked the idea of being able to schedule classes around jobs and family obligations.

One student said he heard the state would reimpose the 90 percent attendance rule, requiring districts to withhold credit if a student missed more than 10 percent of classes.

"It just doesn't seem to be fair to withhold student credit if he misses 12 or 13 days," a student said.

Rep. Ron Black, R-Twin Falls, committee chairman, said he was among lawmakers who voted to repeal the requirement statewide. "It's a local option. It won't be done by the Legislature," he said.

Rep. Jim Hansen, D-Boise, asked student at a telecast from the Boise State University campus if it were possible to have "a school within a school," rather than conducting alternative schools at other locations.

Survey shows public backs measure to limit property taxes

BOISE (AP) — The author of the initiative to cap property taxes at 1 percent of value got a major boost Thursday from a new public opinion survey showing just over half those polled support the One Percent Initiative.

"That is very good news," anti-tax activist Ron Rankin said. "My big concern right now is not becoming too optimistic."

The fifth annual Idaho Policy Survey conducted by the Survey Research Center at Boise State University found that 77 percent of the 810 people polled statewide last fall were aware of Rankin's initiative, and of them 51 percent supported it.

Thirty-eight percent said they opposed the initiative while 11 percent had no opinion.

The telephone survey, conducted during the last week of October and first week of November, had an error rate of plus or minus 3.4 percent.

Only 30 percent had heard of the Democratic alternative to Rankin's proposal, which would restore the 5 percent annual cap on increases in property-tax financed budgets and expand some residential property tax breaks.

The latest results showed a significant shift of opinion since 809 people were polled on the issue in 1991 — a year before voters overwhelming rejected Rankin's original One Percent Initiative. In that poll, only 23 percent supported the proposal and 20 percent opposed it. The other 57 percent either had not heard about it or had no opinion.

Rankin

Critics of the initiative, who spent some $350,000 to defeat the proposition in 1992, conceded that the survey findings showing the shift have increased the pressure on them.

"I don't doubt that there's going to be a significant effort required to education people about this initiative," said Jim Shackelford, executive director of the Idaho Education Association. "But as soon as the public is educated about what this initiative does, they'll start to drift away faster than they did from the last one."

Idahoans Against The One Percent reported on Thursday that it spent over $15,000 during 1993, primarily to cover expenses incurred during the 1992 campaign.

Shackelford contended that considering all the publicity and notoriety Rankin's crusade has received since he launched it in the spring of 1991 support for the new initiative should be higher than just 51 percent, and even Rankin said he thought it should be higher as well.

Rankin, who must collect just over 32,000 registered voter signatures by July 8 to put the initiative on the November ballot, has repeatedly said property taxes must be cap to halt skyrocketing increases that he claims are driving people from their homes.

But critics of his scheme, arguing that Idaho's tax structure is one of the most balanced and least burdensome in the nation, renewed the warnings of 1992 that capping property taxes would force drastic reductions in local services or huge increases in the state income or sales taxes to make up the difference.

Rankin had promised to drop the initiative this year if the Republican legislative majority would pass meaningful property tax relief.

Couple skis into marriage at Schweitzer Mountain

SANDPOINT (AP) — It was truly a white wedding for Brandon Moon and Karen Hempstead.

The admitted ski bums said their vows Wednesday on the sunny slopes of Schweitzer Mountain Resort, where they met three years ago.

"This is the same time of year we first got together, and we wanted to get married where we met," said Hempstead, 32, who works at the resort.

"My mom pushed pretty tough for a church wedding, but she knew us both well enough that she wasn't going to get a traditional ceremony," said Moon, 28, a member of the ski patrol and an acrobatic skier.

There was little tradition about the nuptials, which were performed by the head of Schweitzer's ski patrol. The couple convinced John Pucci to be ordained just for their wedding.

"He said he always wanted to be able to marry people, so we went through the steps to get him in the ministry," Hempstead said.

Pucci completed a course by mail to join the ministry of the Universal Life Church.

Hempstead arrived for the ceremony in a horse-drawn sleigh. She wore a long, white silk skirt, ski coat and sheepskin boots. A bow tie peeked from under Moon's ski jacket.

The couple planned to have the ceremony at the top of the mountain, then ski down to a reception in the lodge. But that changed when the top of the hill fogged in and most of the guests arrived without skis.

"We wanted a short, quiet wedding, but when word got around, we were looking at 50 or 60 for the ceremony," Hempstead said.

Moon said Hempstead's expert skiing caught his eye when they met.

"That's what impressed me," he said. "It took me two runs to catch her."

Teacher may not be charged

LOGAN, Utah (AP) — If he keeps his record clean over the next nine months, a former teacher charged with misdemeanor assault on a student will not be prosecuted.

Former South Cache Middle School teacher Paul Parker has entered into a diversion agreement through Logan Municipal Court. The case was sent to Logan after Hyrum Justice Court Judge LeGrande Christiansen recused himself.

Parker pleaded not guilty to class B misdemeanor assault charges at the Hyrum Justice Court in November, following an incident in which he allegedly pulled a student's ears for disobeying him by opening a window.

The child's injuries required medical attention.

After the incident, the teacher of 30 years was given notice of termination from the Cache County School District. Following negotiations between the Cache Education Association and the district, the school board agreed instead to accept his resignation, entitling him to the benefits he would have accrued during his tenure.

According to the agreement, Parker could face prosecution for the original charge if he violates another law during the nine-month period.

The misdemeanor charge carries a maximum sentence of 6 months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Jerome man says he's innocent of rape charge

Delbert Wesley Reed, 23, 415 Date St., in Jerome, faces a Feb. 4 preliminary hearing. Reed had been booked into the Twin Falls County Jail on Wednesday and 5th District Magistrate Michael Redman set bond at $25,000 at Thursday's arraignment.

According to a police affidavit, Reed admitted having sex with the 21-year-old woman, but said it was consensual.

The woman came to Twin Falls police in early January saying she had been raped after visiting her grandmother at BridgeView Estates retirement center.

She told police that a man she knew as "Bob," whom she had seen and talked to before, asked for a ride home from the facility. She gave him a ride, but once in the car, the man verbally, physically and sexually assaulted her, the woman told police.

The woman said the rapist threatened her and her family if she reported the assault.

Thursday, Reed said he had worked at BridgeView Estates and that Christmas was the last day he worked there.

Police claim arrested man carried stolen hangun

But the man arrested, Christian Todd Borlase, 24, pleaded innocent Thursday to charges of carrying a concealed weapon, grand theft by possession of stolen property and possessing cocaine.

A Twin Falls police detective's court affidavit states that when he arrested Borlase on the 500 block of Addison Avenue East on Wednesday night just after 11 o'clock, he found a .25-caliber semiautomatic handgun on Borlase.

The gun's serial number matched that of a gun taken last week from the Snake River Pawn Shop, the affidavit stated.

Police also said Borlase was carrying a substance that tested to be cocaine. He faces a February preliminary hearing.

Couple report jewelry worth $10,000 missing from home

TWIN FALLS – Two Twin Falls residents have told police that someone stole nearly 100 pieces of jewelry – worth almost $10,000 – from their home last weekend.

According to a police report, some of the jewelry pieces taken were heirlooms that dated to the early 1800s.

Pat and Fred Harder, 2133 Addison Ave. E., said they drove to Sun Valley last Saturday night and returned Sunday evening.

They found the back door to their laundry room ajar, with a window into the house broken, according to the police report.

Items stolen included a diamond ring, pendants, pearls, earrings and necklaces and antique mother of pearl gambling chips dating to about 1820, the report stated.

Motorcycles rip through fossil beds, officials report

HAGERMAN – The Hagerman Fossil Beds were millions of years in the making, but a careless few off-road vehicle riders – mostly motorcyclists – are destroying them in a few minutes' ride.

The national monument's Chief Ranger Bob Willhite said motorcycle riders have cut fences and torn down gates to get on old trails in the fossil beds.

But, because fossils are widely spread through the monument, the riders might not know they are damaging an "irreplaceable resource" when they ride, Willhite said.

Fossils in the monument date back 3.5 million years.

The illegal riding started in 1991, he said. Most motorcycle riders obey the guidelines.

"If we do catch them, we will cite them into federal court," Willhite said.

Anyone who sees someone riding illegally in the national monument can report it to the National Park Service at 837-4793, or the Twin Falls County sheriff's office at 736-4040.

Speakers: Get tough on juvenile crime

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

1994 Idaho Legislature

BOISE – When it comes to juvenile justice, intervention needs to be early, and punishment needs to be fast.

Those two themes dominated a legislative hearing Thursday on Idaho's growing juvenile crime problem. Virtually every witness agreed the system is straining to keep up with more and more children committing more and more violent crimes.

The hearing took place one week to the day after a 12-year-old Rogerson boy was arrested in connection with the death of his father, ranch hand Roland Woods, and New Plymouth policeman Ronald Feldner allegedly was shot to death by a 14-year-old Boise boy.

Members of Feldner's family were among the dozens of people from around the state who overflowed a Statehouse hearing room.

Dale Thornsberry, principal of Robert Stuart Junior High School in Twin Falls, said hardly a day goes by when a police officer doesn't visit his school, and on one recent day five came looking for his students.

"These are junior high school students who used to be innocent at the ages of 12, 13, 14," Thornsberry said. "That is no longer the case."

The crimes his students are committing include burglary, auto theft and weapons theft, Thornsberry said. Often, he said, students bring guns to school to intimidate their classmates.

Referring to one of the state's educational goals, Thornsberry told the legislators: "Let me tell you, folks, it's difficult to 'provide an atmosphere conducive to learning' when kids are afraid of what's going on in

Consensus urged for planners

By Sean L. McCarthy
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – The city and the county need to coordinate planning and zoning issues, the chairman of the county planning and zoning commission said Thursday.

"We need to arrange some kind of communication between county planning and zoning and city planning and zoning," said Terry Ray Kramer of Castleford.

City planners and staffers agreed in a joint meeting Thursday with the county planners.

Much of their discussion focused on the differences between city and county zoning regulations within the city's "area of impact."

Each city and county is required by state law to establish an impact area outside of the city limits. That area can be ruled by city zoning regulations, county zoning regulations, or "any mutually agreed upon plan."

The city of Twin Falls currently controls zoning regulations in its impact area on any parcel smaller than 20 acres. Larger properties are considered part of the county's agricultural area.

When the county approves a division of land in the impact area, that property then falls under the city's jurisdiction, Kramer said.

But what the county approves and what the city approves are two different things, said City Engineer Gary Young.

"Emotions aside, the differences between your rules and our rules is what's creating all the controversy," Young said.

City and county officials agreed that their ordinances need to agree as well.

They were less sure about whether the impact area should be renegotiated or whether the county commissioners would approve a new impact area.

City Manager Tom Courtney said the two planning bodies needed to reach a consensus first.

"I don't think we should be making a decision based on what we foresee the political will to be," Courtney said.

Just as the county does not plan on allowing 6,400 homes to be built south of Curry Crossing, the city probably does not want to annex 10 square miles into its impact area, Kramer said.

City and county officials agreed, however, that meetings like Thursday's were a good start in approaching long-term planning issues.

The joint meeting was precipitated by a county proposal to zone 10 square miles of farmland to allow for residential subdivisions.

Historic Boone House goes on block

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS – Anyone with a note from their banker and the muscle to lift a 250–ton home can bid Saturday on the historic Old Boone House next to the Magic Valley Mall.

Wall Auctioneers and Sales Management Co. of Kimberly is conducting the auction of the house, at 1311 Pole Line Road in Twin Falls.

Auctioneer Kaye Wall said Thursday she's had a few people ask about the house in preparation for Saturday's auction.

The house was owned by Orrin and Juliet Boone, who both died in 1992 and was given to Fund A. Fund A is the Utah investment company that owns the Magic Valley Mall that sits behind the house.

Now the mall wants to prepare for construction of stores on the edge of its parking lot and the Boone House is in the way of that development.

Last year, the mall tried to give the house to the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce to become the new Visitors Bureau, but the chamber couldn't come up the estimated $35,000 to move the house.

The one-and-a-half story bungalow-style house was constructed of lava rock and brick, making it heavy and fragile.

The Boone House was built in 1918 – the year World War I ended, Woodrow Wilson was president and D.W. Davis was Idaho's governor. The house is listed as a historic site by the Idaho Historic Society and in 1980 was placed on the National Register of Historic Places.

Wall Auctioneers will also auction off the four utility sheds, the fences and the trees near the Boone House.

The auctioneers are requiring anybody who bids at the house must have a letter of credit from their bank for $35,000 and must agree to move the house by March 15.

The mall's management has stated the house will be torn down if isn't moved by March 15.

Biologists fear range affect on game

Petition upshot – B2

BOISE – The proposed Air Force bombing range in Owyhee County would destroy much of the critical fawning habitat used by the area's pronghorn antelope herds, according to an analysis by Idaho Department of Fish and Game wildlife biologists.

In the long term, losing the fawning areas would cut herd sizes anywhere from 25 percent to 75 percent, according to the analysis released Thursday.

And, because the unusually productive fawning habitat in the northern section of the proposed range is produced by a "unique" combination of factors, the report states that "there can be no in-kind mitigation for the loss of fawning habitats."

"It will not be possible to reproduce these conditions in places that are not already heavily used by antelope," say the report's authors, Regional Wildlife Manager Louis Nelson and wildlife research biologist Walt Bodie.

The report was presented to Fish and Game commissioners Thursday.

It adds to concerns that the bombing range, proposed by Gov. Cecil Andrus as a way to ensure that nearby Mountain Home Air Force Base will not be closed in the future, would have a crippling effect on

Gator farm OK'd after tangle with bureaucracy

By Mick Normington
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN – After some recent complaints about bureaucracy and losing a harvest season, Leo Ray is about to get his state approval to start an alligator farm.

"It's been a total nightmare of bureaucracy," Ray said.

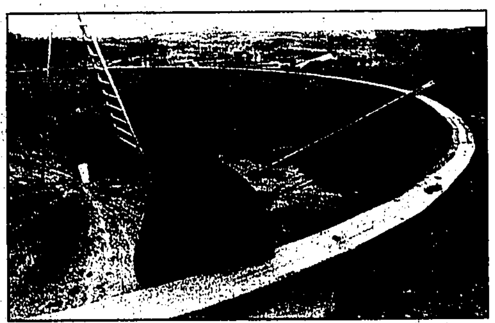
While waiting for approval from the state Division of Environmental Quality, Ray said he's missed a harvest season.

"There had been some confusion between our central office and our site office," Mike McMasters of the DEQ office in Twin Falls said Thursday. "We don't have a lot of experience with alligators."

Ray met with state officials a year ago for approval to raise 200 alligators at his Fish Breeders of Idaho fish farm near Hagerman and was told his idea was possible.

But after those meetings, his request for approval was sent from Division of Environmental Quality offices in Twin Falls to Boise.

And Ray said he was continually asked for information about how he was going to contain the alligators and their waste. DEQ officials were concerned that the alligator waste would get into the nearby Snake River.



ANDY ARENZ/The Times-News

Leo Ray plans to raise 200 alligators at a time in geothermal heated pit near Hagerman.

Thursday, McMasters said he was preparing the approval documents for Ray's alligator farm.

McMasters also said some of the hold up was because Ray got only oral approval from DEQ officials and until just a few weeks ago didn't submit complete written plans of how his operation would keep alligator waste from getting into the river.

McMasters and other DEQ officials recently reviewed Ray's plans and inspected his proposed alligator farm site.

Ray has built tanks for the alligators, which will live in geothermally heated water, and a lagoon to collect their waste. Ray intends to spread it as fertilizer on his 70 acres of pasture.

When Ray gets his DEQ approval, he'll then be able to get approval from the state Department of Fish and Game, which must issue an import permit to allow him to fly 200 baby alligators from Florida into Idaho in August, he said.

He intends to raise them in the 90–degree water for about 2 years until they get to market size of 5 to 6 feet long. Then he intends to sell their meat and skin.

"It's just a pilot project to see if we can raise alligators economically," Ray said.

He added that if any alligators escaped they wouldn't be able to live in Idaho's cold rivers and air.

But McMasters said he and other state officials still have concerns about the threat to public safety from if an adult alligator got loose in the summer.

East End ambulance issue may go to voters

By H.R. Weixel
Times-News correspondent

JEROME – A member of the Valley Quick Response told the Jerome County Republican Central Committee this week that a petition was being circulated in Jerome County to put the issue of a separate ambulance service in the east end of the county before the voters in November.

Shirley Schutte said people in the Eden-Hazelton area had purchased an ambulance using donations and funds from local fund raising events. She said a locally operated ambulance service would give better service than one dispatched out of Jerome. The county ambulance department has had an ambulance housed in Eden for service in the area since August.

"I'm trying to have a speaker at our meetings so we can be better informed about things going on in the county," central committee Chairman Marshall Everheart said. "There was no reason to take sides in this."

Everheart reported on the state Republican committee meetings in Boise, and presentations from candidates including the four gubernatorial and the three lieutenant governor candidates.

The next meeting of the Jerome Republican Central Committee will be at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 17 in the Jerome County courthouse basement meeting room. The public is invited to attend.

For more information, call Everheart at 324-2987 or secretary Mary Childers at 324-7594.

Tribal official upbeat after Air Force meeting

MOUNTAIN HOME (AP) — A meeting between the commander of Mountain Home Air Force Base and Shoshone-Paiute tribal officials improved relations between the two, tribal Chairman Lindsey Manning said.

Brig. Gen. David McCloud toured the Duck Valley Reservation on the Nevada-Idaho border Wednesday and met with the Tribal Council about the proposed new training range for Air Force jets in Owyhee County.

"It was a real good exchange," Manning said.

"We told him we respected him and his position and his charge — providing the best training for his men and women. He in turn told us he respected us and our charge of protecting our way of life and our sacred sites."

The tribes fear the proposed range would harm graves and other sacred sites, and result in more noise from jet aircraft.

Many members complained bitterly at an environmental impact hearing on the range two weeks ago in Boise.

Manning said the two parties hope to meet again, "realizing, of course, we have to try to find a middle ground. We know the general as a person now; he knows us as persons."

McCloud couldn't be reached for comment Wednesday, but Air Force spokesman Lt. Brian McPeek said McCloud called the meeting productive and "feels he has a better understanding of their point of view."

Candidate maintains he's paid his bills

BOISE (AP) — Republican congressional candidate David Leroy said a Boise advertising agency is trying to blackmail him for payment of what Leroy contends is an invalid debt from his 1986 campaign for governor.

But WRC Advertising said Thursday that Leroy has acknowledged the debt in the past, and now that he is running for Congress is claiming he has cleaned the slate from the governor's race narrowly won by Democrat Cecil Andrus.

"He's telling everybody he's paid his bills. Well, he hasn't," WRC President Bryant Reinhard said. "There's other people besides us. It's not just us. For him to sit there and say that he doesn't owe anybody any money, it's ridiculous."

Leroy received what he called an extortion letter from WRC on Thursday demanding payment of $60,517 — an original 1986 debt of $17,317 plus interest of 18 percent, compounded monthly.

Leroy's 1986 campaign manager, Chuck Lempesis, said the bill was not paid because WRC — which handled some $400,000 in media for Leroy — never responded to his demand for a full accounting of all the campaign charges.

But Reinhard denied receiving that demand and said Leroy never responded to monthly letters through 1988 indicating the updated account balance or a number of written reminders about the debt since then.

F&G backs embattled director

By Drew DeSilver
Times-News writer

BOISE – Idaho Department of Fish and Game commissioners expressed "complete confidence" in Director Jerry Conley Thursday, despite hundreds of petitioners calling for Conley's ouster.

State Sen. Mary Lloyd and state Rep. John Alexander, both Pocatello Democrats, delivered the petitions to Fish and Game's offices during the commission's quarterly meeting. Lloyd said the signers were from the Pocatello area.

Conley has come under fire from many southern Idaho hunters in the past several months. They accuse Fish and Game of letting hundreds of deer, elk and other big-game animal die this past winter by not feeding them enough; of not having an adequate plan to restore pheasant populations; and of being unresponsive to hunters' and anglers' concerns.

But commission Chairman Wesley Rose of Jerome strongly defended Conley Thursday, and dismissed the petitions as irrelevant.

"There were no specifics in the petition," Rose said. "They asked for Conley to be replaced with 'a director who will respect and listen to the Idaho sportsmen opinions on the game management in Idaho.' We believe Director Conley has followed the policy direction of this commission and carried out his duties."

During a legislative hearing on Fish and Game matters last week, Lloyd said she had at least 1,000 petition signatures calling for Conley's ouster. But Fish and Game spokesman Jack Trueblood said the petitions delivered Thursday contained fewer than 700 signatures.

A preliminary computer search on a sample of the petition signers showed that fewer than 25 percent of the sample had bought a hunting or fishing license since 1990, Trueblood said.

Range

pronghorn, bighorn sheep, sage grouse and other wildlife.

More than 1,700 pronghorn use the range's section north of the Owyhee River canyon for fawning, fawn rearing and wintering, according to the report.

The low sagebrush habitat, readily available spring water and nearby green forage, distance from canyons and foothills, and isolation from human disturbance combine to create "optimum conditions for antelope during the fawning and fawn-rearing seasons," the report says.

But if the range is formed, the report says, fencing, fires, firebreak construction, and target construction would cause a "total lose of habitat" within the range's target areas, totalling 15,636 acres.

Habitat use in the rest of the range would be anywhere from 25 percent to 75 percent of current levels, the authors say. Just how much would depend on the extent of fires and how the pronghorn react to aircraft noise, ground maintenance crews and other human activities.

The department's staff members also told commissioners at their Thursday meeting that they were concerned over the absence of several "basic mitigation actions" from the draft environmental impact statement on the range proposal.

The actions, intended to help compensate for wildlife disturbance in the range area, include:

- No canyon flights below canyon rims.
- Seasonal flight restrictions to avoid critical wildlife areas.
- Creation of a "sensitive wildlife area" for special management, and restrictions on Air Force training activities in and over that area.

The commission's 1992 endorsement of a two-part range was conditioned on those mitigation actions becoming part of the range plan. So far, however, they have not been included in either the draft statement or the Range Operations Plan.

The Fish and Game staff members also said the range proposal does not clearly identify who is responsible for paying mitigation costs, contrary to department policy.

"It remains unclear if the United States Air Force, other agencies of the federal government, or the State of Idaho becomes responsible for short- and long-term state and federal liabilities associated with this proposal," according to an official summary of the staff's presentation.

Crime

the schools."

Several witnesses, including Attorney General Larry EchoHawk, said lawmakers should at least look at establishing "boot camps" for young offenders, as an alternative to confinement at the Youth Services Center in St. Anthony.

One or more boot camps, he said, would help ease the backlog of young offenders waiting for openings at St. Anthony, which has a court-imposed limit of 110 residents.

But he stressed that confinement, whether at St. Anthony, in a boot camp or in a community setting, must be followed by intensive probation to ensure that young offenders don't fall back into their old habits.

Magistrate Dan McDougall of Pocatello, however, said that to be effective, boot camps would have to include remedial education, family counseling and other programs, not just "getting up early and doing push-ups."

EchoHawk said he would support using some of the money Gov. Cecil Andrus wants to spend on public schools to build a pilot boot camp, to put at least $500,000 into Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) programs, to improve security at community youth facilities, and to establish "youth accountability organizations" – panels of volunteers who work with first-time, nonviolent offenders – in every Idaho county.

In the half-dozen or so counties that already have such organizations, EchoHawk said, they've been "highly successful" in keeping youths from committing more crimes.

Several speakers, including EchoHawk and 1st District Judge Don Swanstrom, endorsed the idea of lifting some of the veil of secrecy that surrounds juvenile-justice proceedings.

At the very least, EchoHawk said, schools, counselors, police officers and crime victims should have access to juvenile proceedings. So should the general public, he said, when youths are charged with serious crimes or have several convictions.

Swanstrom called the secrecy rule "a charade," saying he often hears from his school-age children about cases he has handled or will handle.

"If there's anonymity, it's only because the press and the media can't get at it," he said. "The kids certainly know about it."

Planning

The land is zoned agricultural.

A new residential-agricultural zone would provide an area in the county for residents who own less than 20 acres but do not want to live within any city's limits, according to county officials.

At the Jan. 14 public hearing on the proposal, county residents and city staffers expressed concerns about the impact of extensive residential development.

The commission tabled the proposal, voting instead to form an ad hoc committee with the city planners and other public agencies to study the matter further.

Court rules against man who fled

BOISE (AP) – A motorist can be charged both with fleeing a police officer and drunken driving for the same incident, the Idaho Court of Appeals has concluded.

In a Cassia County case, Fidelmiro Vargas Castaneda argued he was placed in double jeopardy, charged twice for the same crime, when a sheriff's deputy citing him for fleeing a police order and drunken driving.

The Court of Appeals held that the charges were based on separate acts.

At the point when Castaneda got into his car, started it and drove off in an intoxicated condition, that was grounds for the drunken driving charge, the court said.

When the deputy pursued the vehicle and turned on his police vehicle lights, Castaneda speeded up and attempted to flee.

The court said it recognized that the drunken driving offense was continuing as Castaneda tried to flee.

However, it said the alcohol offense could properly be based on acts before the deputy tried to stop him.

Dispose-All head slapped with liens

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

BURLEY – Three Utah companies have filed liens totaling $110,861.67 against a Boise developer, who they say has not paid his bills for work on a private landfill near Burley Butte.

Barney Trucking Inc. and D.P. Curtis Trucking Inc. filed liens against Doug Lomow, president of Dispose-All Inc., for $25,014.26 and $5,881.92, respectively. According to the liens, Lomow has not paid them for hauling clay to the landfill site since October.

Western Clay Company is asking for $79,965.49 to pay for clay the company says Lomow bought in November.

Several months ago Lomow paid off three Idaho companies that had filed liens against his company. The liens send a message to Lomow that the companies will ask a judge to have the sheriff's deparment seize his land and auction it to the highest bidder if Lomow doesn't pay. The money from the sale of the land would pay the companies' bills.

Alfred Barrus, lawyer for the companies, said his clients are able to file for foreclosure immediately, but they will wait a few weeks for a response from Lomow. They have up to six months to file a foreclosure against Lomow.

Barrus represented the three other companies who filed liens. He said Lomow paid them a few weeks after the liens were filed.

"(The companies) are doing this to protect themselves. I think they expect he'll pay them back, once there's a lien on him," Barrus said.

Lomow could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

Rupert officials ponder cutbacks to trim budget

By Liz Wright
Times-News writer

RUPERT – Residents may see fewer street repairs, higher sewage rates or higher recreation fees as the City Council looks for ways to stave off a deficit in this year's budget.

After an independent auditor's warning last week of a city deficit of $42,215.26 for the last fiscal year, council members are looking at ways to put money back into the city's reserve funds.

Already the city council has asked departments to cut ten percent of their budgets to raise about $250,000 for the reserve funds, said Don Dustin, public works director for the city. The departments will probably not buy any more new equipment and will make fewer capital improvements such as street repairs and replacement of irrigation pipes, Dustin said.

Other options to increase the city's coffers include boosting recreational fees, increasing sewage rates for residents and businesses, Mayor W.F. "Bill" Whittom said.

Whittom said two-thirds of people who use the public facilities are from out of town. Those people don't pay enough to adequately fund the city's recreation programs, he said.

The deficit resulted from several costs the city did not budget for, Whittom said. Last winter's bills for snow removal and power for the city buildings was unexpectedly high. He said several state grants did not arrive in time for the city to use them.

Also, Whittom said, last summer industries dumped more raw sewage than the city's sewage treatment plant could handle, creating costly odor problems. The city had to spend more than $100,000 on special chemicals to treat the sewage.

City engineers are studying whether the city's waste water plant needs to be expanded. Committees will decide whether to increase sewage rates for industries, residents and small businesses.

Judge backs state against reservation gaming

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Indian tribes can't operate casino gambling on reservations because it's against state law and the Constitution, a federal judge ruled Thursday.

In a 39-page decision, U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan ruled for the state in a battle over rights granted to Indian tribes by the federal Indian Gaming Regulatory Act.

"It could have been better, it could have been worse," said Ray Givens, attorney for the Coeur d'Alene Tribe.

Idaho tribes argued in a lawsuit that if the state allows any kind of Class III games, such as a lottery and betting on horse races, it must allow any kind of on-reservation gambling, including casinos.

But Ryan accepted the state's argument that the federal gaming act allows tribes to operate only games permitted by state law or not prohibited.

He said a 1987 U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a California case (Cabazon) makes it clear that casino gambling on reservations is banned in states which don't allow it off-reservation.

"Neither the language of IGRA, the Cabazon case on which it is based ... nor the later federal cases interpreted by the act, can be read to allow the tribes to conduct casino-type gambling on reservations in Idaho, when the laws and public policy of Idaho are so clearly against such gaming," Ryan said.

"The state is required to negotiate only as to those Class III gaming activities permitted under state law: a lottery and pari-mutuel betting on horse, mule and dog races," Ryan said.

But the judge also ruled that the state may not conduct its lottery on Indian reservations unless it is done under terms of a compact negotiated by the tribes and authorized by tribal ordinances.

State officials said they will begin negotiating immediately with the Nez Perce Tribe, which wants some of the money the state gets from on-reservation sales.

"In order for the state to allow profit-sharing, it would be necessary to amend the distribution provision in the lottery statute," said Deputy Attorney General David High. "That's a policy call for the Legislature to make."

Bob Bostwick, spokesman for the Coeur d'Alene Tribe, said the ruling would hinder economic development on the reservations.

"Our purpose for operating gaming is to create economic opportunities," he said.

"I'm afraid this decision is just going to help bolster the state's economic blockade on reservations," Bostwick said.

Ryan said the Indian Gaming Regulatory Act allows states to negotiate with Indian tribes on issues such as wages and pot limits, days and hours of operation, and capacity of facilities.

"The state is only obligated to negotiate a compact with the tribes regarding Class III games which are permitted and/or not prohibited by the laws and public policy of the state," the judge said.

Ryan said Idaho law, which forbids casino gambling, and a 1992 constitutional amendment doing the same thing "controls the court's analysis of what gaming is permitted by Idaho and what gaming is against the law and the public policy of the state."

The lawsuit was filed by the Coeur d'Alene, Nez Perce and Kootenai Indian tribes.

The Idaho Supreme Court in October rejected a challenge from the Nez Perce Tribe to the 1992 constitutional amendment which made it clearer that casino gambling was forbidden.

Givens said he hasn't had time to review the entire decision. "However, the two-page declaratory judgment seems to split the baby in half," he said.

Student who pointed gun suspended

NAMPA (AP) — A 14-year-old junior high school student has been suspended for five days by the Nampa School District after being arrested for allegedly pointing and "firing" a toy gun at a teacher.

The South Junior High School student could also face expulsion, according to police.

Although police are sending reports of the incident to the Canyon County Prosecutor's Office, Capt. Julian Gabica doubted any criminal charges would be lodged.

The plastic object, Gabica said, "didn't look like a real gun."

Teacher Paul Fischer told police that he saw something black being passed around his classroom by several students last Monday and then saw what appeared to be the butt of a gun sticking up from the top of the boy's coat.

When he asked for the object, Fischer said, the student pulled it out of his coat, pointed it at him and pulled the trigger.

"He was really shook up about it," said School Resource Officer Paul Nicolosi. "It's something they are not going to tolerate."

The student had received permission to have the toy gun at school for a special project, Nicolosi said, but the instructions called for his mother to "bring the gun to school and she would give the gun to a vice-principal who would take it to the classroom."

Prison investigates charges that guards taunted Death Row inmates

BOISE (AP) — Five guards have been reassigned while prison officials investigate charges that they taunted Death Row inmates on the night of Idaho's first execution in 36 years.

Keith Eugene Wells died by lethal injection early on the morning of Jan. 6 for the 1990 beating deaths of two people in a Boise bar. He dropped his appeals and demanded to be executed.

Department of Correction investigators were checking into whether, on the eve of the execution, Neil Young's "The Needle and the Damage Done" and other death-related songs were piped into Death Row cells over the Maximum Security Institution's intercom system.

The lyrics of the 1971 song include such lines as, "I watched the needle take another man ... Gone, gone, the damage done ... I've seen the needle and the damage done."

Some of the 20 condemned men that Wells left behind on Death Row were shaken.

"It really rattled everybody here," said Gerald Ross Pizzuto Jr., sentenced to die for the 1985 beating deaths of a Marsing woman and her nephew who were prospecting north of McCall.

Pizzuto, 38, said he heard the Young song while sitting on his bunk, writing a letter to his parents about Wells' execution.

"For an officer to do that, that's way out of line. That's like saying, `Ha, ha,'" he said.

"It was so distorted, it made me think it came from the loudspeaker," Pizzuto said, but he conceded it was possible the music was blasting from a radio in another inmate's cell.

Other Death Row inmates said Wednesday that they heard taunts but not the songs, and condemned killer Thomas Eugene Creech said he heard only Christmas music. Creech, who has claimed a role in as many as 40 murders, is on Death Row for the 1981 beating death of another prison inmate.

Boise lawyer Dennis Benjamin said he learned about the allegations while talking to a Death Row client.

Informant: Harris admitted killing marshal

BOISE (AP) — A former cell mate says white separatist Kevin Harris admitted he was not provoked when he shot and killed a federal marshal to set off an 11-day confrontation in the Idaho Panhandle that claimed two other lives, a Boise newspaper reported Thursday.

The newspaper, citing a Sept. 13, 1993, U.S. Marshal's Service document, said James Radler shared a cell in the Ada County Jail with Harris for a week shortly after the northern Idaho standoff ended on Aug. 31, 1992, and told state investigators last fall of Harris's admission.

The newspaper said Radler told Boundary County Sheriff's Deputy Greg Sprungl that Harris and others holed up the cabin just south of the Canadian border were aware that federal agents were on the mountain the day of the shooting and that Harris fired on the Deputy U.S. Marshal William Degan after the agent had identified himself.

Harris, 26, and white separatist Randy Weaver, 46, were acquitted of all charges in connection with the Degan's death during the confrontation that also claimed the lives of Weaver's wife and teen-age son.

Weaver was convicted of failure to appear for trial on a 1989 federal weapons charge but the jury said he would have been acquitted had he appeared. He served 16 months in the Ada County Jail on for failure to appear and was released just before Christmas. He is now living with family and his two daughters in Iowa.

The newspaper said Radler twice offered to testify during the 42-day trial but never did because of miscommunication or bad timing.

During the trial, defense attorney David Nevin acknowledged Harris fired the shot that killed Degan but convinced the jury it was in self defense, and Nevin continued to maintain his client's innocence while discounting Radler's claims.

"There is nothing any more common than a jailhouse snitch who wants to buy his freedom," Nevin said.

Harris has returned to his home in Spokane, Wash.

Since the federal acquittals in July, Boundary County Prosecutor Randall Day and other county law enforcement officials have been conducting their own investigation. Defense attorneys for both Weaver and Harris have said their clients were possible targets of that probe, and the prosecutor said several months ago that the FBI sniper who shot and killed Mrs. Weaver, Lon Horiuchi, was a target as well.

The Statesman said four other federal officers are also the subject of the inquiry and possible state charges, including Assistant FBI Director Larry Potts and the commander of the FBI's Hostage Rescue Team, Richard Rogers.

Rogers declined to comment and said Horiuchi would not comment.

The newspaper quoted federal sources as saying Day has found conflicts between Horiuchi's account of the circumstances surrounding Mrs. Weaver's death and ballistic and other forensic evidence and is preparing to show that Horiuchi was negligent because he violated FBI policy.

Day said no decision about charges would be made until after he receives the report on the internal Justice Department investigation into the confrontation.

"It would be foolhardy for me to do anything without having that as a part of my investigation," Day said. "We have not gotten to the bottom line as to what the evidence will show."

Ford delivers electric car to INEL for tests

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — What Ford Motor Co. considers the world's most advanced electric vehicle will be tested over the next 30 months at the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory.

But a $46,000 battery that lasts two to three years and has an operating range of 100 miles between charges could keep the Ecostar out of commercial production for years, or even decades.

"Even in mass production, if we make great strides and reduce the costs by two-thirds, we'll still have a $15,000 battery, about the price of an average car," Gary Stokes, manager of Ford's modular electric vehicle program, said Wednesday after delivering the silver mini-van to the INEL.

The front-wheel-drive vehicle will be evaluated at the U.S. Department of Energy site and by more than 100 utility companies in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Europe.

Officials arrest man on mail-drug charge

COEUR d'ALENE (AP) — A 38-year-old man who allegedly used the U.S. Postal Service to transport large amounts of illegal drugs into Coeur d'Alene has been arrested.

Authorities arrested Kevin Lane as he left the Coeur d'Alene post office on Tuesday with a package containing five ounces of methamphetamine.

Wayne Longo, special agent in charge of narcotics with the Department of Law Enforcement, said agents were staking out the post office when the suspect arrived to pick up the package.

During a first appearance Wednesday, Lane was charged with drug trafficking and with failure to purchase tax stamps. He remained in jail late Wednesday on a $50,000 bond.

AP corrects statement

The Associated Press

The Associated Press erroneously reported on Jan. 25 that Sen. Dirk Kempthorne, R-Idaho, supports President Clinton's proposed ban on assault weapons.

Kempthorne supports Clinton's call for legislation that would put 100,000 more police officers on the street and send three-time felons to prison for life, but he does not support a ban on assault weapons.

Knight-Ridder News Service

After mailing her sweepstakes entry, Venetta Green was so excited she sat up half the night thinking of all the things she'd buy when the guys with the giant-sized check showed up at her front door: new shoes, lots of them; a new Cadillac; a new house; the rest of the loot would go to her kids and grandkids.

Life would be wonderful, everyone would be happy.

Then Green, who lives in Detroit and works fo ror the city as a transportation technician, started to worry. Would being rich mean bad karma?

Really, she thought, "with that kind of money, would I be disturbing the natural flow of things?"

Only during sweepstakes season do rational people get so carried away about money they don't have. And it's perfectly understandable. Because this month, millions of homes throughout the country are being blanketed with sweepstakes envelopes GUARANTEEING MILLIONS of dollars and FABULOUS PRIZES to LUCKY WINNERS like YOU! It's difficult to ignore such promising messages.

After all, getting rich quick is part of everyone's fantasy.

The folks at Publishers Clearing House won't say exactly how many people have a chance at making that dream come true. They won't say how many sweepstakes applications they send during the year, only that the figure amounts to "tens of millions." They won't talk about the odds of winning, either. That's a company secret. All they'll say is that last year, they gave away about $13 million. (American Family Publishers wouldn't even return phone calls.)

But some of the people who do respond go to extremes to enhance their chances of hitting the BIG MONEY.

It's all part of sweepstakes culture.

With their entry forms, contestants enclose hand-written hard luck stories about ailing husbands and wives and children in need of expensive operations.

They send photos of loved ones, anyone they think might make a connection with the sweepstakes people. And just so there aren't any loose ends, says Dave Sayer, Publishers Clearing House spokesman, they also send pictures of themselves and their homes so the sweepstakes Prize Patrol can find them when they become MILLION DOLLAR WINNERS.

And this is the bottom line: Help us win! Please? "Nothing," says Sayer, "can influence the drawing."

Although, sociologically speaking, the letters and pleas for money do serve a purpose. Says Sayer: "They certainly help us get a feel for America out there.

"They show us that people are kind of the same all over America. They're just good, average, salt of the earth wonderful people that are optimistic and hope they can win.

"That's just the American way."

To be accurate, skepticism is also part of the American way. Not everyone believes they'll strike it rich with the sweepstakes.

"I think I threw away the $10 million thing," says Estil Deaton, 63, a retired warehouse supervisor from Dearborn Heights, Mich. "I could get hit by a comet before I could win one of those."

The four-member patrol waits for winners who aren't at home. Sometimes, they wait for days, holed up in hotel rooms, eating too much junk food.

"It helps to have a sense of adventure," says head Prize Patroller Sayer, who also happens to be one of the Patrol's inventors. "It's good to be an explorer, someone who has a sense of mission and won't stop until the mission is accomplished."

After the prizes are awarded, Prize Patrollers send winners solicitous holiday letters and make occasional phone calls. They call just to see how everything is going, if the winners are happy being rich.

Diane Malcolm likes the calls and letters.

But for years, Diane, 51, chided her husband, Dick, every time he filled out one of those darned sweepstakes entry forms. You're only wasting your stamp, she'd say. No one really wins those things.

But Dick, 51, believed.

He'd study the sweepstakes forms over cups of coffee, carefully filling in his entry. A few times, he ordered magazines.

Someone has to win, he'd say. Why can't it be us? "A lot of people don't think it's real, but it is." Besides, "it's cheaper than a Lotto ticket. It's only 29 cents for a stamp."

Then, last April 15, the Malcolms of Waterford, Mich. won $1 million from Publishers Clearing House. And this time, they hadn't even ordered any magazines.

The Prize Patrol parked down the street.

Armed with champagne, flowers and a sturdy 2-foot-by-2½-foot placard, saying Diane had won a $1 million, Patrollers knocked on the Malcolms' door while Diane was doing dishes.

Dick was watching a Barney video with a grandson.

"I thought maybe it was real estate people or religious people, you know how they come to the door," said Diane.

"I kept saying 'Is this for real?' They had a hard time convincing me."

Now some Customs good news

Dear Abby
Abigail
VanBuren

DEAR READERS: Yesterday, I published letters from readers who had negative experiences with U.S. Customs. Today, we will hear from readers with positive comments:

DEAR ABBY: My husband was in the U.S. Air Force, stationed in Turkey in 1974. When we returned to the United States after 30 months abroad, my husband and I and our 6-month-old son arrived at Kennedy Airport in a storm that had the whole East Coast shut down – so several planes landed at the same time.

My husband went to claim our luggage. When he returned, a customs officer approached him and asked if he was military, wished us a welcome home, signed our slips and sent us on our way. (Before you say, "But he was in uniform because he was military," know this – personnel returning from Turkey traveled in civilian clothes on U.S. carriers.) We did not even have to stand in a line that included people from four full flights that all landed at about the same time. We think kindly of U.S. Customs.

– MRS. BYRON S. MOSS,
OOLTEWAH, TENN.

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I recently returned from a three-week trip to the Orient, arriving at Los Angeles International Airport about 11 o'clock on a Sunday morning. Neither of us was feeling well, having gotten sick on the trip.

After going through eight rigorous customs/immigration inspections at eight different airports in the Orient, conducted by stone-faced, non-conversant customs officers, the officers at LAX were a delight. They welcomed us back to the USA with a smile and said they hoped we had had a nice trip. They searched our luggage adequately, but did not give us a hard time about anything.

My wife and I feel that we were treated well by the officers, and that not all U.S. Customs officers need to attend "charm school."

– G.H. SMITH,
AGOURA, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: I am always dismayed when I receive complaints of rude treatment by any of our customs officers.

This year, Customs cleared nearly 451 million passengers entering the country, and collected $21.6 billion for the U.S. Treasury. At the same time, we attempt to stop narcotics, bombs, guns, chemicals and a host of illegal products from entering the country.

We are not perfect, but we strive for perfection.

For that reason, I am asking all the supervisors at Kennedy and other airports to pay close attention to the treatment of incoming passengers.

In the meantime, many problems can be avoided if travelers know what to expect when they encounter U.S. Customs at the ports of entry. Abby, please ask your readers to pick up a copy of "Know Before You Go" at their local Customs office, or write to the following address: U.S. Customs Service, P.O. Box 7407, Washington, D.C. 20044.

Tough rules in Netherlands

L.M. Boyd
What's what?

To play golf on any of the 56 full-sized courses in The Netherlands you need a "Golf Ability Card." So report the correspondents. You get one, they say, by passing a test. In which you must hit five reasonably straight drives of at least 130 yards, and five approach shots to within 4 1/2 yards of the cup, and five putts from 11 yards with three no more than 6 feet from the hole.

What's the westernmost town in the conterminous 48 states? Those few who know say Port Orford, Ore.

Q. Do you still insist the color of a woman's eyes reveals nothing whatsoever about her character?

A. Never insisted. Who am I to contradict experienced analysts who continue to claim brown eyes tend to be more expressive? They say a woman with such eyes, if and when she flirts, signals in a most intriguing manner. In Love and War, they say, nobody sends a message like a brown-eyed woman.

It was none other than Napoleon Bonaparte who noted, "All celebrated people lose dignity on a close view."

Q. What's the oldest prepared food?

A. Pancakes, probably. At least, that's what the educated guessers think.

Under Point of View, file the simple fact that the Vietnamese refer to what we call the Vietnamese War as the American War.

You recall where the Hollanders first got their tulips, don't you? So you won't surprised to read the tulip is the official flower of Turkey.

Seventy-five percent of all wine after two years of aging is as good as it's ever going to get. So say the specialists.

A Utah State University survey proves that 10 percent of the men who own dogs never talk at length to said dogs. Curious.

About half the real murders are unpremeditated. Committed in frenzy. TV's fiction uses few such. TV prefers planned killings for profit.

Factory orders strong; 1993 best year since 1988

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In the latest sign of a strengthening economy, factory orders for durable goods rose for a fifth straight month in December.

The increase helped make last year the biggest gainer since 1988, despite the lowest level of defense spending in more than a decade.

Economists said the surge reported Thursday — led by business investment in computers and other equipment — pointed to expansion this year despite a likely slowdown in consumer spending in the first half of 1994.

Durable goods orders are a key barometer of manufacturing industry plans. Increased orders often lead to more production and jobs.

In other economic news:

- The government said the number of Americans applying for initial unemployment benefits declined by 56,000 last week, due in part to the effects of frigid weather, a federal holiday and the California earthquake.

The Labor Department said a seasonally adjusted 309,000 people sought benefits for the first time in the week ended Jan. 22, down from a revised 365,000 the previous week.

- Congressional budget analysts predicted the 1994 federal deficit will dip to $223 billion, $68 billion less than they projected a year ago. The figures are similar to those of the Clinton administration and in part reflect an improving economy and continuing low interest rates.

The fiscal 1993 deficit was $254.9 billion, down from a record $290.2 billion in fiscal 1992.

The Commerce Department reported that orders for durable goods rose 8.6 percent last year, including a broad-based 2.2 percent increase in December. It was the fifth straight monthly advance, the longest string since 1987 when orders rose each month from February through July.

The annual increase in durable goods orders was the steepest since orders rose 9.6 percent in 1988, despite the sixth consecutive drop in defense orders.

For the year, defense orders fell 3.7 percent, to $77.5 billion, lowest since 1982. It was the sixth straight decline including a 13.1 percent drop in 1992.

But defense orders shot up 12.6 percent in December, after losses of 0.5 percent in November and 17.7 percent in October. Excluding defense, orders were up 1.8 percent in December.

The 1993 overall durable goods advance was the second straight, including a 3.9 percent increase a year earlier. Orders fell 4.4 percent in 1991 and 1.1 percent in 1990 after a 2.8 percent gain in 1989.

In December, orders set a new record, totaling a seasonally adjusted $142.8 billion, up from the previous high of $139.7 billion a month earlier.

Orders for non-defense capital goods excluding aircraft jumped 6.6 percent last month, the 10th increase in the past 11 months. These orders often are a gauge of business plans to expand and modernize.

Orders for electronic and other electrical equipment led the December increase, up 5.4 percent due to advances in electronic components and communications equipment.

Transportation orders rose 1.2 percent, with increases in all categories except aircraft. Excluding this sector, orders still rose 2.6 percent.

Primary metals orders were up 1.7 percent. Orders for industrial machinery and equipment rose 1.4 percent.

Unfilled orders fell for the 10th straight month, down 0.7 percent to $421.2 billion, lowest since March 1988.

The orders backlog often is a measure of whether current facilities and manpower are able to keep up with demand. When they fall, it often suggests no need for larger production lines and increased employment.

However, some economists contend the shrinking orders backlog is due to shipments outpacing the growth in orders.

Shipments rose 2.2 percent to $145.7 billion, the fifth consecutive increase.

Raiders defensive end Howie Long retires

ATLANTA — Defensive end Howie Long, the last of the Oakland Raiders, retired from the NFL on Thursday, saying "it's time to get on with my life, it's time to grow up."

Long said he decided to leave the game after 13 years when he learned Wednesday night he had been added to the AFC Pro Bowl roster by Kansas City coach Marty Schottenheimer.

"To finish in the Pro Bowl at 34, in my mind, that's the way you should leave sports," he said.

Long said he has spoken with some television networks about broadcasting football, and the conversations will continue. "I won't be in the street," he said.

Aikman may sit out Feb. 6 Pro Bowl on doctor's advice

ATLANTA — Dallas quarterback Troy Aikman said Thursday he will visit his doctor the day after the Super Bowl to determine whether he will be healthy enough to be the starter for the NFC team in the Pro Bowl Feb. 6.

"It's been a painful year," Aikman said. Aikman cut out early during last year's Pro Bowl game and was fined $10,000 by the NFL.

Asked if he thought the Pro Bowl was too demanding after a long season, Aikman said, "I don't know if it's too much. There's no question that it's a great honor to be chosen to play in the Pro Bowl."

Nets forward will be in court to face charges in incident

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — New Jersey Nets forward Jayson Williams faces a court date next week on charges he fired a semiautomatic handgun in the parking lot of the Meadowlands Arena.

Williams, 25, was arrested last Saturday for shooting the hubcap of an empty security truck about 2 a.m. Jan. 15 in a lot reserved for players and arena executive employees, state police spokesman Sgt. Dan Cosgrove said Thursday. A lot security guard had reported the shooting.

CSI women prevail over Ricks, 82-69

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

REXBURG — College of Southern Idaho women put together a strong first half to open up a 13-point lead and went on to beat Ricks 82-69 Thursday night and claim second place in the Scenic West basketball race.

CSI had its winning margin at halftime and it was the closing 38 seconds that proved the big decider.

"We did a nice job of running the offense early," said CSI Coach Joel Bate. "I think that technical foul hurt them at the end of the first half."

The last part would be an understatement since CSI hit eight points in the last 38 seconds to open up the double digit lead.

Keri Andrus hit a 3-pointer and the Ricks bench then was hit with a technical with 11 second left. Amber McEwen collected both free throws and Jeffiner Shaw canned another three at the buzzer.

The Vikings cut the deficit to five midway through the second half and threatened to get closer, but Shaw hit seven of eight free throws over the last 2:43 to preserve the win.

CSI won it at the line, hitting 31 of 44 against 12 of 22 for Ricks, which turned to intentionally fouling the last three minutes.

Golden Eagles fall in final seconds

By Larry Hovey
Times-News writer

REXBURG — College of Southern Idaho went back on the road and back on its heels offensively Thursday night, dropping a 72-70 decision to the Ricks Vikings.

Despite playing perhaps its worst offensive game of the year, the Eagles had managed a tie with 11 seconds left. But the mental problems that have plagued this team all year came back with a vengeance.

First, Brazilian Aylton Tesch jumped in front of freshman Danny Brower in back court trying to draw an offensive charge — something that wasn't called all night — with four seconds showing.

Bower hit both free throws. And while it was difficult to swallow, it perhaps was fitting the way it did end — on a turnover with two seconds remaining.

CSI put itself in a walking offense midway through the first half. That soon extended to a walking half court defense that gave Ricks a nine-point lead on close in shots midway through the second half. And those things walked CSI off the Scenic West Conference plank in all probability.

Ironically, the turning point may have come when the Eagles opened a 26-18 lead with eight minutes left in the first half.

Del Madison hit a three and Ricks transfer Trent Gardner hit two straight threes to open that 26-18 lead.

But the Eagles evidently found some false

Bobcat girls clinch victory with free throws

Trudy Rigby, left, of Burley avoids the defense of Jerome's Lanie Barnes on Thursday night in Buhl.

By Ron Gates
Times-News writer

BUHL — Outwardly calm, Burley's Tiffany Mabey was anything but composed as she approached the free throw line with 13 seconds remaining Thursday.

But the 5-9 Burley junior hit nothing but net on either shot in lifting the Bobcats to a 69-68 victory over Jerome in the District 4, Class A-2 girls' basketball tournament.

"I was so nervous," said Mabey after Lisa Musgrave's jumper for Jerome bounced off the rim at the buzzer. "My knees were just shaking."

Musgrave connected on two 3-pointers as Jerome, which trailed 61-51 with 5:50 left to play, erased its second largest deficit of the game.

The last of those howitzers earned the Tigers their first second half advantage after Mabey snapped a 38-all tie with back-to-back treys early in the third quarter.

"I got after our girls at halftime," said Burley Coach Michelle Skyles. "The main key was defense. We came out so fired up in the second half, then we let up again."

Jerome failed to convert either of Burley's two last minute turnovers to points and watched a third opportunity evaporate when Janae Tolman missed the front end of a one-and-one with 29 seconds showing.

"A more experienced team might have thought to take it to the basket again and see who fouled them," said Jerome's Ken Wright. "We had our chances, but we're a young team and we had used all our time outs by then."

Buoyed by 45-percent shooting from the floor, the Bobcats reached a 22-9 advantage 44 seconds into the second period, faltered briefly, then restored the 13-point margin on Mabey's 3-pointer and two Chelsey Wornell charities.

The Tigers, who shot at a 25-percent clip over the first eight minutes, opted not to fold at that point. Jerome, in fact, doubled its percentage from the field thereafter.

"I credit Ken Wright and the Jerome girls for that," Skyles added. "They're a well-coached bunch who just never quits."

Landis Barnes, who scored 13 of her 15 points in the quarter, ignited a 20-6 burst that culminated in a 36-33 Jerome advantage

Suns' Barkley draws most All-Star votes

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Charles Barkley has lost none of his glamour with basketball fans.

Barkley

The outspoken Phoenix Suns forward was the top vote-getter in the final count of fan balloting released Thursday for the NBA All-Star game Feb. 13 at the Target Center in Minneapolis.

He received 794,836 votes for the Western Conference team, far outdistancing his nearest competitor, Orlando Magic center Shaquille O'Neal, who received 603,346 votes for the East squad.

This is Barkley's eighth NBA All-Star selection and sixth as a starter.

He will be joined on the Western Conference front line by Shawn Kemp of Seattle, who had 481,880 votes. The other West starters will be center Hakeem Olajuwon of Houston (478,018) and guards Clyde Drexler of Portland (493,204) and Mitch Richmond of Sacramento (469,978).

The Eastern Conference starters, in addition to O'Neal, will be forwards Scottie Pippen of Chicago (496,505) and Derrick Coleman of New Jersey (482,261), and guards B.J. Armstrong of Chicago (529,065) and Kenny Anderson of New Jersey (493,690).

City swims in sea of Super Bowl hype

The Associated Press

ATLANTA — Super Bowl visitors arriving at Atlanta's airport this week are being met by a greeter dressed as a big peach who repeats, "Hi y'all, welcome to Atlanta!"

A few steps away are dozens of smiling limousine service agents, eager to provide a comfortable ride downtown for a cool $50.

At Hartsfield Atlanta International Airport, decorated with thousands of Super Bowl balloons and welcome banners, the message is clear and immediate: Y'all have fun. And spend money.

Atlanta is promoting its devotion to Southern hospitality and commerce full tilt this week as it hosts its first Super Bowl, between the Dallas Cowboys and the Buffalo Bills.

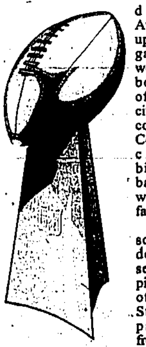
Many of the estimated 76,500 guests seem willing to comply.

"I couldn't care less about Dallas and Buffalo," said Robert Slayton, a data communications salesman who arrived Thursday from Andover, Mass. "I'm rooting for me. I've padded my pockets with plenty of spending money for bars and restaurants."

Slayton, who got Super Bowl tickets through a friend whose father worked for the NFL, had visited Atlanta before and was familiar with some of its nightspots.

"They've got nice hotels, malls and restaurants. That's where I'll be," he said.

That's music to the ears of Atlanta leaders, who hope to reap big bucks and a return Super Bowl engagement if this year's bash lives up to expectations.



Virtually every restaurant and bar in downtown Atlanta is dressed up for Sunday's game, with welcome banners beckoning out-of-towners. The city's best-known company, Coca-Cola, has put up countless billboards and banners to welcome the fans.

Street corner souvenir stands dot the city, selling T-shirts, pins, jackets and other assorted Super Bowl paraphernalia from $2 to $135.

Then there are the exclusive parties, such as the one Olympics officials had Wednesday night at the Atlanta home of heavyweight boxing champion Evander Holyfield, and the celebrity affair hosted by Magic Johnson at the Hard Rock Cafe.

For local residents, few of whom have game tickets or invitations to the elite parties, there's an NFL theme park, a Coca-Cola tent party and something called, "The World's Largest Super Bowl Party." Dozens of suburban bars will be showing the game on large-screen televisions Sunday.

Plans to light up the downtown skyline Thursday night were postponed until Saturday because of bad weather.

Economists say the Super Bowl should generate $150 million in economic impact for the city, which stands to exceed that figure during the 1996 Olympics. The biggest winners are likely to be the downtown hotels, which were booked solid months ago despite premium prices.

"Super Bowl people are here for a four-day stay for a four-hour event, and that obviously has a real impact on the economy," said Leeman Bennett, executive director of the Atlanta Super Bowl Host Committee. "The Super Bowl has more impact than any other event I'm aware of."

While the teams and media arrived in force Monday, the onslaught of fans was not expected until Thursday night and Friday.

Some bar owners, counting on the influx of free-spending football fans, were nervously awaiting their arrival.

"It's been a mixed bag this week," said Joe Deneau, general manager of the Groundhog Tavern in Underground Atlanta, a key downtown tourist stop. "We're hoping it will get busier as the days approach.

"We've definitely had some people in the last few days that have been really good with the spending, and the waiters commented about them tipping good."

A few doors down, Daniel Bartrug, manager of Lombardi's restaurant, was decorating a special Super Bowl bar area and also waiting for the promised crowds.

"We're going to try a new concept — affordable drinks," he said, vowing the bar won't gouge visitors to make money. "We're going to do it with volume."

Fox hires more CBS personnel

ATLANTA (AP) — You don't spell Fox C-B-S. It only seems that way.

On Thursday, the upstart television network unveiled three more major hirings from venerable CBS. And it was three of the older network's most prized possessions: play-by-play announcer Pat Summerall, studio analyst Terry Bradshaw and senior producer Ed Goren.

"We may be an expansion team," Goren said, "but by the end of the season, we're going to be a Super Bowl team."

Summerall, who had been at CBS for 32 years, already was known to be going to Fox to join his broadcast partner of 13 years, John Madden, as the top announcing team at Fox next season. Fox made it official on Thursday, as it did with Goren, who will become Fox's executive producer.

Bradshaw, co-host with Greg Gumbel on CBS's "NFL Today" show, will be one of the hosts of Fox's hour-long pregame show.

"I can say, 'Coming up next, Married With Children' as easy as I can say, 'Coming up next, Murder She Wrote,' " Summerall quipped.

Bradshaw

Fox bid $1.58 billion over four years for the coveted NFC package, knocking CBS off the football tube for the first time in 38 years. Madden, CBS' top analyst, was the first to leave, joining Fox for a reported four-year, $32 million deal on Monday.

The Associated Press reported that day that Summerall and Goren had signed contracts with Fox, as well.

Fox officials made it clear that the NFL will be a year-round operation on their 7-year-old network, with additional programming during the summer and perhaps even some NFL players showing up in Fox programs.

Emmitt Smith, meet Al Bundy.

"Clearly, we're going to add programming that keeps football fresh 12 months a year," said George Krieger, Fox Sports executive vice president.

The pressing Blue Devils outscored Carey 17-4 over the final eight minutes to claim a 58-45 decision over the upstart Panthers.

Jamey Peterson led Carey, which concluded an 8-12 season, with 18 points.

The win sets second-seeded Dietrich up for a rematch with No. 1 Shoshone, this one for the championship, at 7:30 p.m. Saturday night.

Mavericks drop 9th straight road game

Pro basketball

LANDOVER, Md. (AP) — The Dallas Mavericks nearly won their third game of the season, but instead lost their 16th straight Thursday night as Tom Gugliotta scored 23 points to lead Washington to a 98-95 victory.

Down 94-93, the Mavericks forced a turnover. But Jamal Mashburn missed a layup and a 3-pointer, and Calbert Cheaney made two free throws and Gugliotta made a layup to doom the Mavericks to their ninth straight road loss.

Jim Jackson had 21 for Dallas and Mashburn, who missed 16 of 23 shots, finished with 19 points.

Cavaliers 100, Bulls 84

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Mark Price and Gerald Wilkins hit consecutive 3-point shots during an 18-2 fourth-quarter run as Cleveland ended Chicago's seven-game winning streak.

The Bulls, who had won their last five games with Cleveland including a four-game sweep in the playoffs last year, remained a game ahead of their pace at this point last season. The Cavs have won seven of nine to get to .500.

Price had 21 points and 14 assists and Wilkins scored 17. Scottie Pippen led Chicago with 31, none of them in the fourth quarter.

Nuggets 113, Pacers 106

DENVER — Rookie Rodney Rogers came off the bench to score 25 points and get nine rebounds and four steals — all career highs — as Denver sent Indiana to its fifth straight loss.

Rogers' 3-point basket from the right corner with 1:23 left put Denver ahead for good, 104-103, and started a 10-0 run after the Pacers scored eight straight points to take their only lead of the second half and erase a 15-point fourth-quarter deficit.

Denver also got 21 points from Dikembe Mutombo and 17 from Stith. Reggie Miller led Indiana with 21 points.

Rockets 113, Kings 97

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon scored 24 points and Houston hit 70 percent of its shots in the second quarter in extending Sacramento's losing streak to six.

The Rockets hit 16 of 23 shots in the second quarter, including a string of three straight 3-pointers by Mario Elie, to break open the game and take a 62-37 halftime lead.

Wayman Tisdale and Mitch Richmond scored 15 points apiece for the Kings and Otis Thorpe had 13 points and 14 rebounds for the Rockets.

SuperSonics 102, Nets 92

SEATTLE — Gary Payton scored 21 points and Sam Perkins and Ricky Pierce had 20 each to lead the Seattle Supersonics to a 102-92 victory over New Jersey on Thursday night, snapping a season-high three-game losing streak.

The Sonics improved their NBA-best record to 31-8, including 18-2 at home.

Derrick Coleman, New Jersey's leading scorer with a 21.2 average, was held to 12 points on 5-of-17 shooting before being ejected with his second technical foul with 3:11 left. Coleman made an obscene gesture to the Seattle Coliseum crowd as he walked off the floor.

Kenny Anderson led the Nets with 20 points, but Seattle's high-pressure defense forced him to commit seven turnovers.

Weber State beats Idaho in overtime

College basketball

MOSCOW – Weber State's Kirk Smith sank two free throws with 2:12 remaining in overtime to give the Wildcats a 90-88 win over Idaho in the Kibbie Dome on Thursday night.

The Wildcats, 13-7 overall and 3-2 in Big Sky Conference play, outscored the Vandals 8-6 in the overtime and withstood a three-point attempt by Orlando Lightfoot at the buzzer that would have won the game.

"We had our best player with a wide-open shot at the basket and it just didn't go in," said Vandal Head Coach Joe Cravens. "I'll take that situation every time in all the games we have left."

Idaho's Mark Leslie forced the overtime with a 3-pointer from the right corner with just three seconds remaining in the game to tie the score at 82.

Leslie's basket capped an Idaho 11-3 run in the final 2:40 of the game to bring the Vandals back from a 79-71 deficit. "

Robbie Johnson, who played all 45 minutes, exploded in the second half for the Wildcats with 24 of his 28 points. He hit 5-of-9 three pointers in the half.

In the overtime, Johnson hit back-to-back baskets to give the Wildcats an 88-84 lead with 2:52 to play. Nate Gardner brought the Vandals to within two points with a pair of baskets, the last coming with 1:06 left. Gardner finished the game with 10 points.

Lightfoot finished with a game-high 32 points as he hit 13-of-28 shots from the field. Lightfoot also had 10 rebounds and four steals. Deon Watson had his fourth-straight double-double as he had 20 points to go with 10 boards. Mark Leslie added 12 points for the Vandals, who fellto 10-5 this season and 3-1 in conference play.

Colorado State 71

Utah 70

SALT LAKE CITY — Jeff Shelley hit a 3-pointer with 4.3 seconds left in the game to lift Colorado State to a 71-70 victory over Utah on Thursday night.

In a game where neither team led by more than four points in the second half, Tony Block had given Utah a 70-68 lead with 34 seconds to play when he made one of two foul shots.

Damon Crawford led CSU (12-5 overall, 5-3 in the Western Athletic Conference) with 24 points, while Bobby Sellers added 13, all in the first half.

Ma Jian scored 13 points and Doug Chapman added 11 points to go with as many rebounds to pace the Utes (9-8, 3-5).

Oregon State 82

TEMPE, Ariz. — Stevin Smith scored a career-high 39 points and tied his own Pacific-10 Conference record with 10 3-point field goals as Arizona State beat Oregon State 88-82 Thursday night.

The Sun Devils (9-6, 4-2) shot 76.9 percent from the field in the first half as Smith canned seven of eight 3-point attempts. But Arizona State led by just eight points at halftime and gave up the lead at 69-68 with 9:54 left in the game.

But Smith and teammate Mario Bennett, who had most of his 24 points on layups and dunks, proved to be too much down the stretch for Oregon State (5-10, 1-5) and gave the Sun Devils their fourth Pac-10 win in the last five outings.

Brigham Young 82

Wyoming 66

PROVO, Utah — Russell Larson scored 35 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead Brigham Young to an 82-66 victory over Wyoming Thursday night.

Larson scored seven of his points during an 11-2 run as BYU (13-4, 6-2 in the Western Athletic Conference) broke open a tight game midway through the first half.

David Murray led Wyoming with 17 points while Theo Ratliff had 16 points and 11 rebounds. Kenneth Roberts was BYU's only other player scoring in double figures. He had 10 points.

Penn St. 71, No. 7 Purdue 68

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — John Amaechi's dunk with 1:35 to play put Penn State ahead, and the Nittany Lions held No. 7 Purdue scoreless for the final 3:35 Thursday night to take a 71-68 victory, its second straight at home over a ranked team.

The Nittany Lions (9-6, 2-4 Big Ten) used a matchup zone to limit Purdue inside and hot shooting helped keep the Boilermakers from running. Purdue (16-2, 4-2) had only two points off fast breaks.

Purdue's Glenn Robinson missed two shots in the final 32 seconds — one with six seconds left and three Nittany Lions converged on him in the lane. Danny Earl rebounded for Penn State and hit one of two free throws before Matt Waddell missed a 3-pointer at the buzzer to set off a wild on-court celebration by the students in the crowd.

Cincinnati 76

No. 8 Massachusetts 74

CINCINNATI — LaZelle Durden scored 16 points in the final six minutes Thursday night to rescue Cincinnati, which blew a 22-point lead before rallying to beat No. 8 Massachusetts 76-74.

Dontonio Wingfield, returning from a one-game suspension for missing class, scored five points and took three charges as Cincinnati (13-5) opened the huge first-half lead against the cold-shooting Minutemen.

Massachusetts (15-3) snapped out of its shooting slump in the second half and caught up with 10 minutes left. Derek Kellogg's 3-pointer put UMass up 47-45 — its first lead since the opening seconds of the game.

But Wingfield, playing sparingly on a broken right foot, returned and stopped the comeback with a 3-pointer, and added two baskets as the lead went back-and-forth.

No. 13 Arizona 98, Oregon 86

TUCSON, Ariz. — Damon Stoudamire ended a two-game scoring slump with a 27-point performance Thursday night and No. 13 Arizona finally put away Oregon 98-86.

Stoudamire went without a point for 14:22 of the second half, and Arizona's free throw shooting was the difference as Oregon played its strongest game in years at McKale Center.

Arizona made 26 of 38 free throws, while Oregon was just 9-for-13.

Orlando Williams' 16 points led the Ducks.

Arizona hit nine of 17 3-pointers — and also made only nine of 17 from the free throw line — in the first half. The Wildcats finished with 12 3s and Oregon had nine, its season high.

EWU considers reducing number of scholarships

CHENEY, Wash. (AP) — Eastern Washington University may unilaterally limit the number of football scholarships it offers, regardless of what the NCAA or other Big Sky Conference schools do, its president says.

The Big Sky Conference voted last year to reduce the number of football scholarships offered at member schools from 65 to 45, but the effort stalled when the NCAA Division I-AA schools voted against going lower than 62.

EWU President Mark Drummond said Wednesday his school probably will forge ahead to reduce the number of scholarships it awards.

"We're not bound to offer any level of scholarships by the conference," Drummond said. "Here at Eastern, we might go to 30 regardless of what the rest of the conference goes with. So whether the whole conference goes to a lower level of scholarships or not, I can almost guarantee you that Eastern will."

Among the eight Big Sky Conference schools, Idaho and Boise State are opposed to additional cuts, the Montana schools are taking a wait-and-see stance, and the others face economic hardships if they do not cut scholarships, Drummond said.

EWU's program this year was funded for 65 scholarships, but only 57 were awarded, he said.

"I'm sure this will be back on the table," he said. "But I'm not sure with what level of vigor."

American slams Stefan Edberg

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Todd Martin repeatedly slammed backhand returns for winners to undermine Stefan Edberg's serve-and-volley game Friday and move into the final of the Australian Open.

Martin, seeded ninth and playing in his first Grand Slam semifinal, defeated the fourth-seeded Edberg 3-6, 7-6 (9-7), 7-6 (9-7), 7-6 (7-4) in 3 hours, 50 minutes.

Martin's victory ensures that Sunday's final will be an all-American battle. Martin will face the winner of the semifinal between top-seeded Pete Sampras and two-time defending champion Jim Courier.

Edberg, who received treatment on his right knee early in the match, was overwhelmed at times by the power of Martin's service returns — especially from the backhand side. Martin continually left Edberg watching at the net as passing shots flew by.

Martin missed several passing shots by inches in the first set, when Edberg also used lobs to strand the American at the net.

But those passing shots starting going in during the second set as Martin rifled shots down both lines. Martin led the second set 5-3, but lost three straight games before capturing the 12th game and the tiebreaker.

Edberg saved three set points in the third-set tiebreaker, including one easy putaway at the net that Martin slammed way long. But Martin prevailed on his fourth set point, passing Edberg with a forehand shot and punching the air in triumph.

Martin also won the fourth set in a tiebreaker, though it took four match points to finish off Edberg. On the final point, he slammed an ace down the middle to complete the victory, then hit a ball high into the stands and raised his arms in triumph.

Even while he was winning the biggest victory of his career, the 23-year-old Martin never varied from his mild-mannered personality. He apologized after almost hitting a ballboy with a shot, and lifted his finger to his mouth to quiet a spectator who yelled in triumph after an Edberg double-fault.

On Thursday, Gabriela Sabatini stood helplessly at the back of the court as drop shots landed just on her side of the net. She lunged in vain for sharply angled cross-court shots that skipped by her for winners.

It took slightly more than a total of two hours for the second-seeded Sanchez Vicario and top-seeded Steffi Graf to win their semifinal matches.

Graf, seeking her fourth Australian Open title in seven years, overpowered Kimiko Date 6-3, 6-3, while Sanchez Vicario won 6-1, 6-2 over Sabatini.

Graf will be playing Saturday in her fifth consecutive Grand Slam final, and 22nd overall. Either Graf or Monica Seles has been in 27 of the last 28 women's Grand Slam finals.

Graf won the Australian Open title in 1988, 1989 and 1990. The past three years it was won by Seles, who has been sidelined since being stabbed in the back April 30 during a match in Germany.

3 tied for lead at Phoenix Open

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Dan Forsman, a four-time winner on the PGA Tour, tied Gary McCord and Mark Lye with 6-under-par 65s Thursday to lead the Phoenix Open after a weather-delayed first round.

Play was held up for 40 minutes because of frost on the 6,992-yard TPC of Scottsdale course, and two groups were unable to finish before dark.

McCord, whose threesome was first to start, said he was grateful for every second of delay in the chilly morning.

Phil Mickelson, who won the Mercedes Championship on Jan. 9, fared best among the game's big names with a 67. That kept him a stroke behind Rick Fehr, Brandel Chamblee, Bob Estes and Mike Hulbert.

Andrew Magee, No. 3 on the money list after winning the Northern Telecom Open on Sunday, and defending tournament champion Lee Janzen were in a group of 13 at 68. Janzen bogeyed his last hole in a rush to beat nightfall.

Brett Ogle, who won the Hawaiian Open two weeks ago and tops this year's money list with $244,250, and Mark Calcavecchia matched par along with 23 others.

Calcavecchia, the winner at Phoenix in 1989 and 1992, was playing his first competitive round since tearing his right anterior cruciate ligament in a skiing accident Dec. 20. He will have the knee repaired after this tournament.

McCord enters a few events before returning to the broadcast booth each season and has a history of starting hot. He shot a first-round 66 here last year and started the Northern Telecom a week ago with a 7-under 65.

The next day, McCord had a 74 and went on to finish 68th.

Gant, Braves agree to record deal

NEW YORK (AP) — By settling his salary arbitration case with the Atlanta Braves, outfielder Ron Gant agreed to the largest one-year contract in baseball history.

Gant and the Braves agreed Thursday at $5.5 million, $500,000 more than Ruben Sierra's deal with Texas in 1992, the previous high. Gant, who is eligible for free agency after this season, got a raise of $1.4 million.

He hit .274 last season with 36 homers (fifth in the National League), 117 RBIs (third) and 26 stolen bases. Gant had asked for $6 million and the Braves had offered $5.2 million.

New York Yankees pitcher Jim Abbott, Colorado catcher Joe Girardi and Baltimore pitcher Ben McDonald also settled, leaving 65 players remaining in arbitration. For those who don't agree, hearings begin Tuesday.

Also, first baseman Steve Balboni returned to the Kansas City Royals, accepting a minor-league contract. First baseman-outfielder Gene Larkin, whose 10th-inning single in Game 7 won the 1991 World Series for the Twins, agreed to a minor-league contract with Minnesota.

Abbott, whose no-hitter against Cleveland on Sept. 4 was the highlight of the Yankees' season, agreed at $2,775,000, midway between the $2.9 million he asked for and the $2.65 million the team offered.

If not for Madison this would have been a stroll in the park for Ricks, but the University of Pacific transfer came up with 18 second half point to single handedly hold CSI in contention.

Ricks biggest lead came at 56–49 with seven minutes remaining before Madison sparked a comeback to cut the deficit to 69–67 with 25 seconds showing Sandro Verajao hit two free throws which Brower quickly offset two seconds later.

Verajao tied it with a putback with 11 seconds showing, setting up the final heroics for Bower.

"I don't know what's left to say," said Coach Steve Irons in a third straight lethargic road showing. "We're sure not in a very good position now and I don't know what the answer is. We wanted to set the tempo, but we started walking and standing and nothing was happening."

Midway through the first half freshman Shawn Bankhead sustained a dislocated little finger on his left hand and played very little thereafter. He is expected to be all right for Saturday's game at North Idaho.

"She can shoot," added Wright, a 27-year coaching veteran who is retiring after seven year years with the Jerome girls program. "Sometimes you knock it down, and sometimes you fumble it away."

Thus 15-7 Burley, a 65-51 opening round Buhl victim, returns to test the Indians (16–4) again at 7 p.m. Tuesday.

A Burley reversal there would force a third postseason meeting between the two at that same hour on Wednesday in order to determine the fourth district's sole automatic state tournament representative.

The eventual champion opens state play against the District 1-2, Panhandle area, runner up at 8:15 p.m. Feb. 10 in the Moscow High School gymnasium.

The second place team gets another chance to reach Moscow via a one-game playoff against its Dist. 5 counterpart. That contest is set for 1 p.m. on Feb. 5 at Minico.

Faustwork theater explores things that aren't what they seem

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Faustwork Mask Theater is not quite dance and not quite theater, but, in many ways, it's all that and more.

Mostly, it's a genre that's hard to define, according to Robert Faust, who established his masked performing troupe 10 years ago.

"There are relatively few entertainers who focus on mask, so we are fairly unique," said Faust in a phone conversation en route to his upcoming performance in Twin Falls. "Our show is mostly fun."

Actually, Faust explained, there are two main facets. During Faust's shows, people are either laughing or in awe.

"Sometimes people's jaws are dropping, and they are thinking, 'How did they do that; it looks so real?'" Faust explained. "There are some strange distortions of the body and some magical looking scenes, but there is a lot of comedy, too."

Faust came to mask theater from a background of dance and mime. He's performed and choreographed with Pilobolus Dance Theater, Martha Clarke and the Opera Ensemble of New York and was one of the creators of the 1984 Obie Award-winning production of "The Garden of Earthly Delights." He also helped conceive and direct "Midnight Carnival," an off-Broadway show at the American Place Theater in New York City.

Faust, now 43, learned to make masks in a mime class in 1978. He and his company create all the masks they

Women making news

Idaho's 1st women's newspaper hits streets monthly this weekend

By Joan Bean
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Nine months ago, Priscilla Goldmann had an idea. This weekend, she's putting it down in black and white.

Idaho Women's Times will hit the streets throughout southern Idaho, dedicated to more in-depth coverage of women's health issues, sports, employment, education and other matters than the state's daily papers provide.

"I think it's really exciting," Goldmann said. "It's been fun and interesting and I think once we're out there women, hopefully, will find it as worthwhile and as meaningful as what I'm trying to achieve."

Too often, Goldmann said, papers report issues of interest to women only from a man's perspective.

More than half of most dailies' sports coverage, for example, is devoted to men's and boys' activities, she said, with only a smattering of news about girls' and women's sports. And many of the studies on heart-disease issues that come out in print have to do with research done on men, so she will try to get her hands on women's studies and publish them.

Goldmann

The Idaho Women's Times, she said will fine-tune and address women on these issues, she said. And it will also provide role models through profiles.

Rep. Patricia Schroeder, D-Colo., who chairs the Congressional Caucus for Women, is featured on the cover of the first issue and wrote a article about women in health. Also profiled is Marilyn Shuler, executive director of the Idaho Human Rights Commission.

"We're telling her story, and we feel that in Idaho we have women who are wonderful role models and mentors," she said. "And every month we well be picking a woman through a vast array of names that have been given to me, and we will be telling her story."

Goldmann said the newspaper will have a number of highly qualified contributors: Dory Lundy, former writer for the Los Angeles Times and Palm Springs Magazine; Judy Spritzer, a writer for the Colorado Woman News, and Suzanne Brittsan, who has written articles for Cycling magazine, to name a few.

She said the paper will be politically neutral, and cover anything pertinent to women. It will be basically a news publication, she said — not a place to find such items as "How to bake a pie," although there will be a focus on nutrition. The newspaper will also provide resources for readers.

"For instance, lupus - many women have lupus," she said. "Our newspaper is going to tell you how to get hold of the National Lupus Foundation, and how to recognize signs and symptoms."

In addition, printouts on such subjects will be available on request, she said. And if a woman is looking for job training, she will be put in contact with organizations that can help.

Goldmann said the Idaho Women's Times evolved as a result of interest shown in another publication that evolved from an idea of hers, "Mujeres Unidas de Idaho" (Women United of Idaho), a women's Hispanic newsletter for the Mujeres Unidas organization.

Goldmann, who is Hispanic, began putting together the newsletter two years

Don't expect magic from Beatles reunion

The Washington Post

"Don't [illegible] world tour or even a new album [illegible] call it a Beatles reunion [illegible] George Harrison [illegible]

And they can't really be the Beatles. After all, as George Harrison had noted after McCartney first teased fans in 1989 about a Beatles reunion, there would be, could be, no Beatles reunion "as long as John Lennon [illegible]."

"The only thing they've actually promised is that they're going to try and come up with [illegible] music for the video series, and if anything more happens, we'll see," [illegible]

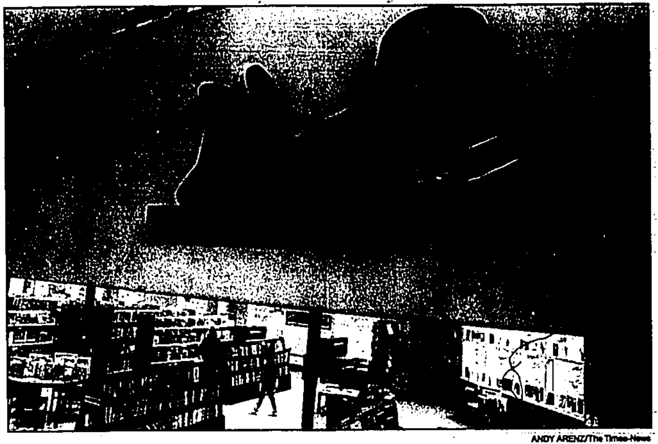
Art, literature meet at public library

By Denise Turner
Times-News writer



ANDY ARENZ/The Times-News

TWIN FALLS – At the Twin Falls Public Library, an intricate woodcarving is the latest example of "art meets literature."

The three-dimensional-style woodcarving, of a child engrossed in a book, was hung over the staircase of the children's library on Monday night. It's the work of local carpenter Danny E. Boyd and local graphic designer Mary Elizabeth Jones. Boyd also hand-carved the letters, "children's services," that hang nearby.

"We wanted something to represent children's services and be an integral part of the library," said children's librarian Annie-Laurie Burton. "This layered pine blends with the rest of the wood in the library."

The woodcarving was made possible by a $500 donation from First Interstate Bank, explained Merlene York, the library's foundation executive. The money covered the cost of materials. Jones donated her time, and Boyd put many unpaid hours into his "labor of love."

"He (Boyd) has raised three children in the community, and he felt good about doing this," Burton said.

Children who have visited the library this week have been excited about viewing the woodcarving, Burton noted. So much so that some of them have written thank-you notes to Boyd.

"Thank you for making that awesome thing in the library," one second-grader wrote.

Several preschoolers drew Boyd some pictures, including a smiling face and a rainbow. The kids' comments ranged from "I like to read, too" to "he (the child in the carving) is my size."

Currently, snowmen and tapestries from Sawtooth fourth graders fill two walls.

Upstairs, on the library's main floor, a rotating quilt display, courtesy of Desert Sage Quilters, resides next to a cabinet filled with replicated tools from the Herrett Museum. A painting of "Shoshone and Main, 1907" by local artist Leon Smith is hung outside the Idaho Pacific Northwest Room, near Thomas Moran's "Shoshone Falls on the Snake River" and John Horejs' mountain scene in oil.

Beside the front door of the library is an item handcrafted by Gus Flowers of Jerome. It's a giving tree – which, after all, is what makes the library's blend of art and literature possible.

5-voice Del-Vikings maintain the harmony over 4 decades

By Denise Turner

TWIN FALLS – The Del-Vikings became a group in 1957, when five Air Force guys gathered around a piano in Pittsburgh and plunked out a tune they called "Come Go with Me."

The group's leader, Clarence Quick, died in 1983 – but his music never did.

The Del-Vikings have remained true to Quick's musical style, explained Frank Ayers, who was in Twin Falls on Wednesday between shows at Cactus Petes. Ayers joined the group in 1958.

The Del-Vikings continue to showcase their oldie hits – such as "Whispering Bells," "Sunday Kind of Love" and "Jitterbug Mary," in addition to "Come Go with Me." Based in the New York/New Jersey area, they tour about a third of the year.

They've performed at the Westbury Music Fair, Carnegie Hall, Meadowlands Arena, Garden State Arts Center and the Apollo Theatre, among other places.

Group members incorporate a little comedy into their act, they say. ("We point out T. J., and everybody laughs.")

Lloyd Butch Phillips (also known as T. J., or Top Job) is the central focus of many of the group's capers.

When asked about goals for the group, it was Phillips who said, "I want to be a multimillionaire."

Off stage, group members, who range in age from 40 to 57, are dads and grandads. Phillips has a son who's a professional drummer, and other members of the group have children who perform in the act from time to time.

Group members, in addition to Phillips and Ayers, are Louis Velez, Arthur Martinez and Henry Harmon. All of the Del-Vikings are self-taught musicians. ("We went to UCLA – the university at the corner of Lexington Avenue in Brooklyn.")

Quick named the group, with inspiration from a Viking basketball team in Brooklyn and a woman named Dellar, who was to become Quick's wife.

Current Del-Vikings have been careful to maintain a five-voice group through the years, even though some of the oldie groups have varied their numbers. Having five people keeps the original harmony intact, the Del-Vikings contend.

When the group returns to the East Coast, after the Cactus Petes concert, the plan is to record an album of original songs. The Del-Vikings are looking for new material for that album, and they invite people to contact them and make a pitch.

"Rock and Roll Remembered," a Del-Vikings album on both CD and cassette, will be available at the Cactus Petes performance.

Run ends Sunday

The Del-Vikings will perform two shows a night through Sunday at Cactus Petes Resort Casino in Jackpot. The 8 p.m. show is a dinner show, and the 11 p.m. show is a cocktail show. Dinner show prices range from $7.95 to $9.95, and an oldies-but-goldies special menu is available. The cover charge for the cocktail show is $5. Call 1-800-821-1103.

New videos

New videos this week in Twin Falls stores:

"Hard Target" Classy action movie — kick-boxing star Jean-Claude Van Damme's best ever — showcasing the skills of Chinese director John Woo, who's making his Hollywood debut. The hero is pitted against a decadent sportsman (Lance Henriksen) who arranges human-prey safaris for millionaires. It's the umpteenth rip-off of the 1932 "The Most Dangerous Game" — but so what? The plot merely serves to kill time between the great action sequences. (Los Angeles Times) (Great American Video, Video West)

"Last Action Hero" One of the most expensive (cost estimates run as high as $120 million) flops in film history. In this convoluted, film-within-a-film fantasy, you're often reminded that the action you're watching isn't real — a bummer for real action-movie fans. Arnold Schwarzenegger, as action-film hero Jack Slater, is clearly having fun poking fun at his image. Too bad the fun isn't contagious. (Los Angeles Times) (Video West, Great American Video)

"Coneheads" Feeling nostalgic for the Coneheads bits from the early "Saturday Night Live" shows? Then whatever you do, don't rent this movie — it'll destroy all those fond memories. Dan Aykroyd and Jane Curtin, who starred in the old skits, are reunited as the coneheaded, robot-like aliens who make bumbling attempts at being average Americans. Mostly juvenile humor that may have some appeal to the sub-teen and early teen set. (Los Angeles Times) (Video West, Great American Video)

"Rookie of the Year" In his directorial debut, Daniel Stern, who overdoes it playing the pitching coach, doesn't miss a cliche in this comedy about a 12-year-old boy (Thomas Ian Nicholas) who mysteriously develops a blazing fastball and becomes a pitcher for the Chicago Cubs. Despite a procession of stereotypes, it's entertaining hokum that manages to keep you interested — right down to the inevitable ninth-inning finale. Gary Busey co-stars. (Los Angeles Times) (Great American Video, Video West)

"The Ice Runner," which had a brief L.A. run last fall, stars Edward Albert Jr. as an American agent who is betrayed by his country and imprisoned in Siberia. Variety's Todd McCarthy called it "a strange, minor-key attempt to make an old-fashioned, Cold War-style American thriller in the new Russia." (Seattle Times) (Video West, Great American Video)

Roll over for 'Beethoven: The Ultimate Canine Caper'

By Roy Bassave
Knight-Ridder Newspapers

Video game of the week

Formats: Super Nintendo.

Price, manufacturer: $59.99, HI Tech Expressions.

Recommended ages: 5 and up.

How the game works: Based on the sequel to "Beethoven," you must help Beethoven find his four little pups who are in the living room one minute, then gone the next — all before his sweetheart Missy finds out. Your search will take you all over town, with nothing but your keen canine sense of smell to sniff out any trouble. You'll also encounter many wild and hilarious surprises.

Good points, bad points: Excellent graphics, with Beethoven taking up a good part of the screen. The action moves smoothly over the screen and it's very nonviolent. If it was rated, it would get a "G." Easy play makes it great for children as young as 5 years old to have fun.

Beatles

tles getting together to tie a bow on this package that covers their career."

A call to the London headquarters for Apple Corp., which controls all Beatles-related material, elicited a "no comment."

The Beatles first started talking about a film that would show their story from their point of view before they split up in 1970. It was to be called "The Long and Winding Road."

But the breakup was so acrimonious, and the four Beatles became so caught up in lawsuits and countersuits, that they never worked together again. The last four-man studio session was on Jan. 4, 1970, at EMI/Abbey Road Studio 2, where the Beatles completed "Let It Be." Their last appearance as a quartet was the rooftop performance of "Get Back" on Jan. 30 that year.

The first Beatles reunion questions were probably posed an hour after they broke up and have never really let up.

But the former Beatles continued to flirt with the idea of a historical film. In a deposition just days before his death in December 1980, John Lennon used the film proposal as evidence that the Beatles still had a right to protect their name. "We talked about getting together and playing a number before the cameras for the end of this film," he said.

Over the years, there were many reunion offers — some for cash and some for conscience — ranging from the 1971 benefit Concert for Bangla Desh to "Saturday Night Live's" 1976 offer of $3,200 (the show's standard musical fee) to a $230 million proposal from New York promoter Sid Bernstein.

Just last week Bernstein, who presented the Beatles at Shea Stadium in 1965 and 1966, offered McCartney, Harrison and Starr $25 million if they would perform as the Beatles at next year's 25th anniversary of the Woodstock Festival.

"I don't think they'll take Sid any more seriously than anybody else does," said William King of Beatlefan magazine. "I can't for a second believe they'd get up onstage or anywhere else with a stand-in and call themselves the Beatles. It goes against everything they've said for the last 20 years."

King, Wiener and Jim Berkenstadt, who broke the story of the ex-Beatles' reunion in the collectors' magazine Goldmine this month, agree it's highly unlikely there will ever be a new album under the Beatles name unless it's drawn from the vast reservoir of unreleased material.

"It would be a very difficult challenge for them to record this music and not have it compared to the past," says Berkenstadt.

Berkenstadt learned of the latest sessions from an employee of one of the former Beatles. The employee, promised anonymity, said the former Beatle himself had told him that back in August, McCartney, Harrison, Starr and producer George Martin had indeed recorded one song together at a secret location. "There were no details," Berkenstadt said, "but he said that the song was great."

King agrees that some of the music to come out of a new collaboration may not be so "incidental." "Since George and Paul are strong songwriters on their own, it's hard to believe that the three are going to get together and not do any songs where they sing," said King.

One of the things that will have to be worked out is the credits. EMI has the rights to release Beatles recordings — after approval by Apple — but whatever may emerge is unlikely to be considered "by the Beatles," particularly by the Beatles. EMI has only McCartney under contract; Harrison is signed to Warner Bros., Starr to Private Music. What's most likely to happen is that there will be a new entity, with a new name.

John Lennon was still alive the last time three ex-Beatles played together. That was in May 1979, at a party celebrating Eric Clapton's marriage to George Harrison's ex-wife, Patti. In the course of the evening, Harrison, McCartney and Starr all drifted to the stage, where they ended up playing not only Little Richard and Chuck Berry classics, but also "Sgt. Pepper," "Magical Mystery Tour" and "Get Back."

No tape exists of this event, but McCartney said soon afterward: "We were having a booze-up and a laugh and suddenly we were playing together again. It felt pretty good to me ... . It'll be great to do one like that again with just the four of us, once Sean (Lennon) is 5 and John starts playing again."

Mark David Chapman ended that possibility with a bullet a year later.

With Lennon gone, "it's not likely (McCartney, Harrison and Starr) are going to put something out as the Beatles," said King.

use in their performances. Faust masks have also been used by the American Conservatory Theater in San Francisco, among others.

It's performed by Faust and his wife, Paola "Polly" Styron. The two have been married for almost eight years.

The couple met doing theater Off-Broadway – specifically "The Garden of Earthly Delights."

"We like to say our courtship took place in 'The Garden of Earthly Delights,'" Faust said, with a laugh.

Expect to see Faust and Styron doing their own version of "Beauty and the Beast," in addition to a comic routine a la Fred and Ginger.

At home in Connecticut, Faust and Styron, who have no children, spend a chunk of their off hours in an office/workshop/rehearsal studio which they constructed in their barn.

When they look toward the future, Faust said, they hope to be spending more time refining their act.

"We would like to have better lighting, better design, more of a set," he said.

In other words, more of the same – with the emphasis on more.

ago, and then found there were many other women who were interested in it.

"I was putting in there health concerns in regards to heart issues, diabetes and AIDS, and because of that (the interest expressed by women in general) and seeing the desire for more information; specifically health, I said 'I think perhaps what we need is some kind of newspaper, newsletter, magazine — something for women.' "

And so Goldmann set the wheels in motion and rounded up core group of about 10 people to help her. The majority of the newspaper's layouts are being handled by Colorado Woman Magazine. The local production is done by C.M. Copy and Print in Hailey and the final printing is being done by the Burley Reminder. A large part of the distribution is being handled by the Starr Map Co. of Hailey.

Goldmann who is the mother of four children, ages 1 through 17, is a National Ski Patroller and emergency medical technician. She's been active in social issues since her high school days in California.

She got involved in student government at age 14, and served on the school board in a district that covered six high schools.

In that capacity she was instrumental in changing the dress code to allow girls and women to wear pants in the schools. To do that, she had to put together a bill, take a petition to all the high schools, and then present it to the school board.

"And I think that was the first time I ever saw that if we did something, if we unified — all the young girls and young women in the high school coming together over one purpose and over an injustice, if we would all do that perhaps our issues would have more strength and validity."

After Goldmann came to Idaho she worked as a volunteer at the Boise Art Museum from 1988 through 1991. She was a chairwoman for the museum's mentor program, for which she wrote scripts and helped devise video presentations to help new trainees.

She said her husband, Jim, has been very supportive of her newspaper venture, and has given technical advice. She said a couple of years ago he wrote an energy publication, and is an excellent writer.

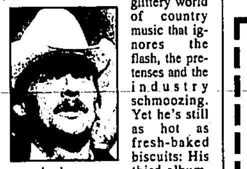
Car-fixin' star prefers slow lane

Knight-Ridder News Service

"Hello, this is Alan Jackson," says this aw-shucks voice with a soft Georgia drawl via the telephone. It's exactly the voice you imagine when listening to Jackson's earnest slices of Americana, songs like "Chattahoochee," "Chasin' That Neon Rainbow" and "Mercury Blues."

Then again, Jackson is one of the few artists in today's prepackaged, glittery world of country music that ignores the flash, the pretenses and the industry schmoozing. Yet he's still as hot as fresh-baked biscuits: His third album, "A Lot About Livin' (And A Little 'Bout Love)," just hit the three million sales mark, his "Chattahoochee" single is the No. 1 country tune of 1993 and he recently nabbed a Grammy nomination.



Jackson

If he doesn't win, it won't surprise him. For all of Jackson's success (each album has sold more than the previous), he usually walks out of those award shows with one trophy, two if he's lucky, while Vince Gill or Garth Brooks needs a wheelbarrow to drag the accolades home.

"The awards are great. I've won a few and have been nominated several times. But I'm not real visible," says Jackson, 35, from his home in Nashville, where he lives with his wife of 14 years, Denise, and daughters Mattie, 3, and Ali, four months.

"I pretty much make my records, tour and spend all my free time with my family. I'm not a real social person. I'm just kind of a laid-back homebody."

Things were different in early 1990 when his first record, "Here In the Real World," had just been released. Back then Jackson was willing to do the industry parties, hobnob with the honchos, "do whatever I could do to get the career going. But I didn't grow up in the music community, so that is not natural for me."

Jackson grew up in Newnan, Ga., the son of a mechanic. He figured he would probably ease into his father's profession and spend the rest of his life restoring classic automobiles. Music wasn't much of a priority during the early part of his life.

"Nobody in my family played any instruments," he says. "My sisters and mother sang some but there were not too many records going in my house and not too many concerts where I grew up.

"But I guess I had a natural attraction to music. I sang in high school some, was part of a duo with a friend of mine, then it grew into a band."

'Philadelphia Story:' Prejudice on trial

By Rita Kempley
The Washington Post

AP photo

Tom Hanks stars in Hollywood's first big-budget movie to tackle AIDS head-on.

WASHINGTON — An all-American crowd scene in "Philadelphia" teems with fighting-mad AIDS activists and poster-wielding homophobes. "AIDS cures homosexuality" reads one handmade sign, caught and held for a moment by Jonathan Demme's cameraman. It's a clue — maybe not a subtle one — that prejudice, not gayness, is on trial in the heart-wrenching courtroom drama at hand.

Set in the City of Brotherly Love for ironic reasons, "Philadelphia," like so many classics of this lofty genre ("To Kill a Mockingbird"), tries the beliefs of the American people. Are they as noble as they imagine? Is not this a land where all men are created equal — or must they be straight men?

It's less like a film by Demme than the best of Frank Capra. It is not just canny, corny and blatantly patriotic, but compassionate, compelling and emotionally devastating. Mr. Smith in this instance is Joe Miller (Denzel Washington), a crafty ambulance chaser who advertises on TV. Like Paul Newman's alcoholic loser in "The Verdict," Joe is the film's true protagonist. It's he, not his client, Andrew Beckett (Tom Hanks), who needs to change. Though he has committed himself to the law, Joe is a judgmental man. Homosexuals make Joe's skin crawl.

Andrew, on the other hand, is a spiritually evolved human being — just, forgiving and kind. Yes, he is dying of AIDS, but that is not a matter of character, as the movie points out. Yes, he was unfaithful to his partner, Miguel (Antonio Banderas), but that is hardly an uncommon occurrence. He and Miguel — like Hillary and Bill — have already put that behind them.

Well on his way to the next world, he is already half-man, half-angel when he asks Joe to represent him in a suit against his former employer. Andrew, the young top gun in a prestigious law firm, has been fired for alleged incompetence, but he is sure that it's because he has AIDS. Joe, who can hardly keep himself from wiping his hand on his pants after shaking Andrew's hand, is initially reluctant to take the case. But his better instincts prevail.

The bad guys are an all too familiar passel of pale-skinned, cigar-sucking fat cats, exemplified by Charles Wheeler (Jason Robards), Andrew's mentor and head of the firm. Wheeler is a member in good standing of the old boys' network; his vengeance is especially harsh because he feels he has been betrayed. Andrew testifies that he didn't tell his employer about his illness as he had planned after Wheeler chuckled appreciatively at a lame anti-gay joke.

Director Demme and screenwriter Ron Nyswaner don't cut the antagonists much slack, nor are they guilty of any more delicacy in portraying Andrew's nauseatingly supportive family — an upbeat brood that makes the Waltons look like the Eichmanns. But then, Demme and friends don't give a damn for subtlety.

Though it has been criticized for its mainstream thrust — there are no romantic scenes between Miguel and Andy — it is self-censorship and star power that will save it from the ghetto of art houses. It is, at the very least, a giant step forward for Hollywood, which tends to portray homosexuals as either psychopathic cross-dressers or the giddy fruitcakes who live next door.

Actors don't come any more average-Joe-like than Hanks, who shows both enormous courage and immense ability in the role of Andrew. Bald, emaciated and marked by purple Kaposi's sarcoma lesions, Hanks heart-wrenchingly re-creates the dreadful cost of the disease. In its own way, "Philadelphia" is really a buddy movie. Genial, handsome and full of subversive humor, Washington brings far more than the irony of skin color to the role of social avenger.

Boldly acted and superbly directed, "Philadelphia" has as much to say about the grief of parting as it does about equal rights and the beauty of compassion. "Goodbye, my angel," Andrew's mother (Joanne Woodward) whispers before leaving him for the last time. Angels and AIDS again. Perhaps there is a correlation. It would be nice to think so. C.S. Lewis: Evangelist for our time

By David Awbrey
Knight-Ridder News Service

C.S. Lewis is probably the least likely person to be cast as the lead character in a Hollywood tear-jerker. A tweedy Oxford don, author of children's books and one of the foremost Christian intellectuals of the 20th century, Lewis wasn't the kind of man you would expect to find romancing Debra Winger.

Lewis' mid-life love affair with an American poet is the subject of the movie "Shadowlands," a surprising hit considering that it centers more on the pain of love than the joy of sex.

Starring Anthony Hopkins as Lewis and Winger as Joy Davidman Gresham, "Shadowlands" is the film version of an award-winning play by William Nicholson. Based on a true story, though somewhat distorted for dramatic effect, the movie tells of the improbable pairing of scholar and poet.

Described by people who knew her as intelligent, energetic and often abrasive, Joy Gresham began corresponding with Lewis in 1950. They finally met in 1952 when she visited England and sought his help getting a book of her poems published.

She also was fleeing a difficult marriage, and soon settled in England with her two sons (only one is portrayed in the movie). Lewis helped her financially after her divorce. Friendship turned into love and, despite a 16-year-age difference, they were married in 1956. Soon afterward, she was diagnosed with cancer, which struck fiercely, went into remission and returned to claim her life in 1960.

"Shawdowlands" focuses primarily on how loving and losing Joy gave Lewis a profound lesson in suffering, which he had treated as little more than a topic in Christian theology.

"The pain at the end is part of the pleasure of the present," Joy tells Lewis in the movie.

"Shadowlands" works both as a three-hankie soap opera and a character examination of two remarkable individuals. Perhaps more important, the movie could introduce millions of people to C.S. Lewis and make them curious enough to explore some of his writings.

Lewis was a literary jack-of-all-trades. He wrote academic treatises on such topics as Medieval poetry and 16th-century English literature. He was the author of "The Lion, the Witch and the Wardrobe," a fairy tale, and the Narnian Chronicles, a space trilogy for children. He also was a radio personality and one of the most popular teachers at Oxford and Cambridge

No one could question Lewis for brainpower, but he had the unique ability to explain complex theological issues in simple, yet compelling terms. I devoured such Lewis books as "Mere Christianity," "The Screwtape Letters," "The Problem of Pain" and "The Great Divorce."

In our secular age, where religious topics are often consigned to the cultural equivalent of Siberia and when religion is often tainted with intolerance and emotionalism, Lewis was an articulate defender of historic Christianity.

The generation that produced such giants as Karl Barth, Reinhold Niebuhr and Paul Tillich has been replaced by scholarly specialists who see religion more as a sociological phenomenon than a search for meaning in life.

As a result, university schools of religion and seminaries have little to offer the preacher in the pulpit or the person in the pew who want to apply biblical faith to their everyday lives.

Perhaps at no time in Western history has there been a greater gap between the cultural elite and the common person than today. Surveys show that more than 90 percent of the American people believe in God. Yet, unless the topic is the "religious right" or Islamic fundamentalism, God is virtually never cited as a source of truth in scholarly or political journals.

Likewise, some of the country's finest minds spin intricate analyses of the causes of crime, teen-age pregnancy, drug addiction and other social plagues, but they seldom mention the loss of spirituality as a primary factor for those afflictions. In the most influential and best-educated segments of Western society, there is a blankness where God once existed.

Stowe dazzles in 'Blink;' 'Shadowlands' shines

Los Angeles Times

Movies playing in the Twin Falls area this weekend. Ratings are by the Motion Picture Association of America and reviews are by the Los Angeles Times.

Capsule reviews

"Blink" (R). The best — the only — reason to check out this muddled thriller is for Madeleine Stowe's extraordinary performance as a formerly blind woman who regains her sight and witnesses (sort of) a murder. It's a first-rate piece of acting in a second-rate shocker. Aidan Quinn, as a police detective, looks like he's prepping to be Columbo's nephew. (Twin Cinema)

"The Air Up There" (PG). Perhaps the first film to be high concept both literally and metaphorically, this story of an American college coach (Kevin Bacon) determined to recruit a 6-foot-10 African basketball player is a feeble and simplistic attempt at an adventure comedy. Narrative cliches and bathroom humor keep it very far from the final four. (Ace Theatre)

"Cool Runnings" (PG). Blithe, infectious comedy with serious underpinnings about a Jamaican bobsledding team competing in the Olympics and coached by John Candy. A beautifully crafted film for all ages. With Leon, Doug E. Doug, Rawle D. Lewis and Malik Yoba. (Jerome Cinema)

"Intersection" (R). A dithering romantic drama about a self-absorbed dolt of a husband going through yet another mid-life crisis, this Mark Rydell-directed film has a glamorous cast (Richard Gere, Sharon Stone, Lolita Davidovich) but no real idea of how to involve an audience. (Twin Cinema)

"Iron Will" (PG). A charming live-action fairy tale set in 1917 about a boy, his dogs, and a darn tough sled race, this is sweet and sentimental family filmmaking of a kind that Walt himself would have loved. Mackenzie Astin is perfectly cast as the charmingly innocent, physically fit hero, Charles Haid has directed with appropriate simplicity. (Twin Cinema, Jerome Cinema, Ace Theatre)

"Shadowlands" (PG). Anthony Hopkins is excellent in this adaptation of William Nicholson's play about the love affair between C.S. Lewis and Joy Gresham, played here by Debra Winger. It's a high-class weepie that doesn't do justice to Joy's life so much as it canonizes Lewis', which is perhaps why Winger seems constrained. She's playing the sacrificial angel, but she has some power anyway. (Mall Cinema)

LEGAL NOTICE

The South Central Private Industry Council, Inc., pursuant to the Job Training Partnership Act (JTPA), hereby issues an intent to Solicit for a Basic Skills Development program. The program will provide training to develop basic skills in youth and adults assessed as being deficient (below the 8th grade level) and/or whose basic skills need to be enhanced in order to increase their chances of success in training. The instruction needs to be 'contextual', that is, it must have a work place context. The instruction must be designed to teach what is not known, not re-teach areas the participant is competent in. It is expected that an applied, competency-based curriculum will be used. The program operator needs to be prepared to set up sites throughout the 8 county area to accomodate the many service providers and geographic locations of participants. An estimated $50,000 is available for the program.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

BOBBY WOLFF

"He that can't endure the bad, will not live to see the good."
— Yiddish proverb.

What should you do when faced with four obvious losers in a major-suit game? The last thing to do is to concede down one. Play on. The worst that can happen is that the opponents get their four winners; the best that can happen is that you give them what an enemy deserves.

Dummy's spade ace wins and a low trump goes to the jack, king and ace. West leads another spade to dummy's king, and South leads a second trump, East's discard confirming the suspected bad break.

Obviously South must lose three trump tricks, and he has no place to put his losing diamond. Is it time to concede, with complaints about the bad luck? Grit your teeth and play on. The worst is already obvious; from here on, things can only improve.

South should win his trump queen, leaving West's two high trumps at large. Dummy's club king is cashed, the top diamonds come next, and South ruffs dummy's last spade (trick number seven for South). West must follow suit to the ace and queen of clubs (nine tricks), and when South leads his last club, West is finished. If he ruffs, dummy discards and eventually scores a small trump. And if West discards, dummy scores a low trump immediately for trick number 10.

What to do with four "unavoidable" losers? Force the enemy to take two of their winners on the same trick.

COMPETITION?

WHAT COMPETITION?

We've got stiff competition in January. Football games, cold weather, you know the drill. But that's good news for you, because it means all our new Toyotas are cold weather priced with low, low payments.

At Wills Toyota you don't have to have $1500 or $2500 or $3500 in cash or trade-in to get a low lease payment. All it takes is 1st month's payment and a $150 refundable security deposit! When you get down to it, leasing is nothing more than a different way to finance a car! Whether you buy or lease it takes little or nothing down to get your new Toyota at Wills!

Garth plays woman guilty of murder

By John Crook
TV Data

TV audiences should be forgiven if they experience a strange sense of deja vu while watching "Lies of the Heart: The Story of Laurie Kellogg." The ABC original movie, which premieres Monday, covers very familiar territory and does so without much distinction.

Based on a 1991 murder case, "Lies" stars Jennie Garth ("Beverly Hills 90210") as Kellogg, a young mother who is accused and later convicted of enticing four Harrisburg, Pa., teen-agers into murdering her 43-year-old husband, Bruce (Gregory Harrison). During her trial, Kellogg testified that her late husband had severely abused her, both physically and emotionally, during their 10-year relationship.

As recounted in the movie, 16-year-old Laurie Francis begins living with divorced 33-year-old Bruce Kellogg after he "buys" her from her father for $500. In short order, Laurie drops out of school to meet Bruce's exacting standards for housekeeping. While he is at work, Laurie turns their home into a haven for messed-up teen-agers.

Although Bruce harshly warns Laurie not to get pregnant, the two eventually marry when they discover she is expecting what will be the first of two sons. Marriage fails to mellow Bruce, however, and his cruelty toward Laurie escalates. After many years of abuse, she finally snaps when two of her young friends confide that Bruce has sexually molested them.

Accompanied by 18-year-old neighbor Denver McDowell (Alexis Arquette) and three other young friends, the now-26-year-old Laurie travels 250 miles in the middle of the night to upstate New York, where Bruce is staying at his lakeside cottage. Her intent, Laurie testified at her trial, was merely to confront her husband about the allegations of sexual abuse.

Nevertheless, while Laurie waits outside in the truck, McDowell and a friend enter the cabin in the dawn hours and the boy fires four shots into Bruce Kellogg, killing him. Arrested shortly thereafter, McDowell pleads guilty to second-degree murder in exchange for testimony against Laurie. Her revelations of spousal abuse - part of her attorney's attempt to built a defense based on Post-traumatic Stress Disorder and Battered Women's Syndrome - are discredited by the prosecutor, who paints Laurie as a cold-blooded manipulator who seduced McDowell, plied her young friends with alcohol and then drove them to kill her husband. Found guilty, Laurie Kellogg currently is serving 25 years to life in prison.

Garth seems sorely out of her depth in this title role and her Laurie comes across as a pallid, passive victim. Usually cast in sympathetic leading-man roles, Harrison makes the most of the change of pace he's offered here, and the intense Arquette, brother of Rosanna and Patricia, demonstrates why he is beginning to generate some serious buzz in Hollywood.

Daly romances woman to find stolen money

By Ron Miller
Knight-Ridder New Service

"Dangerous Heart," this week's premiere movie on the USA cable network, is a strange romantic thriller that will test your capacity for improbability in love stories.

Lauren Holly of "Picket Fences" plays the distraught widow of a police officer who falls in love with the drug dealer who ordered her husband's murder. She's unaware he's romancing her only to find out where her late husband stashed about $1 million in stolen drug money.

What makes the movie rise marginally above the routine is that the drug dealer has to clean up his act to play a convincing suitor — and, in the process, not only begins to fall in love with the widow, but also to enjoy her straight life.

Charged with playing this complicated — and hardly credible — character is Tim Daly, the star of the "Wings" comedy series.

Daly does a fine job as unsavory Angel Perno, with the help of a sinister slicked-back hairdo, a beard and a sleazy wardrobe befitting a drug lord who runs a tavern in Oakland as a cover for his crooked activities.

Consequently, it's jarring to see Daly after he shaves his beard, restyles his hair and slips into the Brooks Brothers look to romance the widow Carol (Holly). He does such a good job of playing the creep in the first half that we never really believe he's gone straight.

Fortunately, Patrick Cirillo's teleplay takes time to show us what a crumbum Carol's late husband was. Lee McLean (Jeffrey Nordling) is an undercover cop who's gone bad, addicted to drugs himself and no longer able to afford the habit unless he steals from the drug lords. After we watch him snort cocaine and lie repeatedly to Carol about his activities we can understand why her mourning period might be shorter than usual.

Celebrity gossip

Q: What's become of Susan Anton, that statuesque and very beautiful model-actress, who once had an affair with Sylvester Stallone? Has she dropped out of show business? — M.R.

A: California girl Susan, who stands six feet tall at least, made a big splash in the late '70s and early '80s starring in such flicks as "Goldengirl" and romancing the likes of Stallone and, later on, the diminutive Dudley Moore. More recently, Susan has turned her attention to TV and to night clubs, performing as a singer-dancer. She has settled down and married TV producer Jeff Lester. The latest from Susan is that she's starring in a stage presentation, "The Great Radio City Music Hall Spectacular," co-starring, of course, the Rockettes. She'll tour the country in the show. It's somewhat ironic, Susan tells me, because she was always considered too tall to be a Rockette.

Anderson

A: That's not what my Hollywood spies tell me. They report that Loni and Los Angeles attorney Geoff Brown are getting serious. Latest word is that the couple has actually set a wedding date — the moment Loni's divorce from Burt is final. Even though they first dated only weeks ago, they've reportedly picked the spot for the planned wedding — the resort town of Lake Tahoe, Nev. All parties say it will be an "intimate" ceremony.

Q: We thought Jesse Bradford, who plays that spirited youngster in "King of the Hill," is terrific. Is he new on the Hollywood scene? — M.A.

A: At age 13, Bradford is already a movie veteran who's made a mini-career of playing the offspring of well-known actors. He was Harrison Ford's son in the thriller "Presumed Innocent," Robert De Niro's offspring in "Falling in Love," John Cusack's young kid in the amusing "My Blue Heaven" and James Woods' son in the TV movie "The Boys."

LUCKY DOGS: If you can find no real redeeming social value in the film "Indecent Proposal," five Los Angeles canines would give you a good argument. Seems director Adrian Lyne didn't want to cast any of the usual Hollywood dogs in the film, so he and the casting people visited a number of L.A. animal shelters. Five very lucky dogs were spared at the last minute when they were rescued by the filmmakers. After the filming, two pups wound up with the film's star and the remaining trio found equally good homes with the members of the movie crew.

Q: Tell a worshiper, is Tori Spelling, that beautiful actress in TV's "Beverly Hills 90210," going to marry Nick Savalas, Telly's son? — G.P.

A: They're both young and have just been dating. It's doubtful whether they're even dating anymore, since he recently racked up his Porsche on a Beverly Hills street and the young lady with him wasn't Tori.

Q: We hear that although she denies it, Oprah Winfrey keeps lavishing very expensive toys on her fiance, Stedman Graham. Doesn't that make him some sort of kept man? — A.R.

Winfrey

A: Don't ask that question of Graham, the 42-year-old former basketball player who stands 6-foot-5. He's highly sensitive about suggestions that he's some sort of gigolo, romancing Winfrey for her huge fortune. When a columnist for a Chicago newspaper wrote that Oprah gave Graham a million-dollar office suite, he was perturbed. He called the columnist and explained that the gift of some office furniture was a Christmas present, costing considerably less than $1 million. Maybe the bigger question is when Stedman will marry TV's most successful woman.

Q: Why are all those celebs like Candice Bergen flocking to do TV commercials? Is it the money or do they just want to keep themselves in public? — S.F.

A: I'd say it was for the big money they're paid. The latest signers are Jill St. John and her husband, Robert "Hart to Hart" Wagner. They'll be promoting yet another diet plan.

Q. Tell me about Sean Astin of "Encino Man" and "Rudy"? How old is he? Is he single? — N.L., Portland, Ore.

A. Astin is 22, the son of actors John Astin and Patty Duke. He made his acting debut at 7 with his mom in an ABC "After-School Special," "Please Don't Hit Me, Mom" and his movie debut at age 12 in "Goonies." He's married.

Q. Please give an update on Bruce Cabot. He was in many John Wayne movies. Is he related to the late Sebastian Cabot? — D.O., Burlington, Wis.

A. Bruce Cabot's real name was Etienne de Bujac. He was a native of Carlsbad, N.M., and no relation to the British Sebastian Cabot. Bruce Cabot's last movie was a James Bond opus, "Diamonds Are Forever" in 1971. He died in 1972.

Q. In the late 1940s, there was a movie called "Saratoga Trunk" that starred Gary Cooper and Yvonne DeCarlo. Do you know where I can find this movie on video? — S.L.F., North Hollywood, Calif.

A. The movie is not on video.

Q. I have all of Marilyn Monroe's movies except "Bus Stop" and "Clash By Night." I have been told by video stores that those movies are no longer available. Why? — R.H., Granbury, Texas.

A. Both movies have been issued both on video tape and laser disc. It could be that the stores simply don't stock them anymore. It's also possible that they are no longer available. Some movies are released for home use for a limited time, then withdrawn from circulation, usually to build up future demand.

Q: We hear that Annette Funicello was constantly badgered during her Mouseketeer days by Walt Disney to wear skimpy bathing suits and change her Italian name. Can that be true? — T.K.

Funicello

A: Annette, now 51 and battling multiple sclerosis, says she has nothing but fond memories of the late Walt Disney. After all, her Mouseketeer stint on TV, from 1955 to 1958, led to a Disney studio movie contract and success through her teen years and into her 20s. Disney once advised her against changing her name to Annette Turner, which she thought was a good idea because everyone mispronounced Funicello. He countered that Funicello was a beautiful Italian name. And rather than baring more of herself on screen, Disney asked Annette to stick to one-piece bathing suits — no bikinis — not to uphold her youthful anatomy, but her budding movie star image. In retrospect, she figures that he was right on both counts.

Q: We feel for Yolanda Quinn, the long-suffering wife of Anthony Quinn, especially since he publicly embarrassed her by fathering a child with a younger woman. Is Yolanda divorcing him? — B.Z.

A: Not likely. Despite her famed husband's philandering, which supports his concept of himself as a macho type even at 78, she knows him well enough to realize that she's quite in control of things. Quinn still jumps when she calls, especially when he strays. I've seen this pair around town at various fancy shops. When the Italian-born Yolanda is finished buying, she crisply calls out "Andiamo!" ("Let's go!") The actor/painter comes over immediately and seems eager to remain in her good graces.

Q: We were amazed to hear that Clint Eastwood, of all people, is into changing diapers these days. Has the recent birth of his daughter changed Clint from a macho movie hero to a domesticated wimp? — M.B.

Eastwood

A: Call Clint what you may — although I wouldn't recommend doing so in a one-on-one encounter. But the fact is that he occasionally gives actress Frances Fisher a break and changes the diapers of their three-month-old daughter, Francesca. Clint loves being a new daddy again — his other children from a prior marriage are fully grown. And he isn't shy about admitting it. The very fact that the 63-year-old star is a new father convinces many that Clint is still very much a macho, man's man.

Q. My mother told me that Mark Hamill, who played Luke Skywalker, was killed in a motorcycle accident. Is this true? — D.B., Hudson, Ohio.

A. Hamill was in a near-fatal automobile accident, but it was before filming "Star Wars" in 1976. Since the last of the "Star Wars" movies, "The Return of the Jedi" in 1983, Hamill, 41, has done mostly stage work and a few TV appearances.

PARK CITY, Utah – The Sundance Film Festival will be held through Sunday.

The festival was founded in 1984 by actor-director Robert Redford as part of his Sundance Institute. It is generally considered the top independent film showcase in the United States.

Sundance screenings typically start at 10 a.m. and run past midnight, so it's possible to see as many as five or six films in a single day.

Park City accommodations fill up fast and are rather expensive, but Salt Lake City lodging is another option. (Salt Lake is just about a half-hour's drive from Park City via Interstate 80.) Reservations are advised in either town, since the festival coincides with the height of ski season.

Tickets for the 1994 Sundance Film Festival are on sale now. Limited passes may also still be available and tickets may sometimes be obtained by simply showing up at the festival box office or – as showtime approaches – at the individual theatre. But be warned: Sundance grows in popularity every year, and it may not be possible to get tickets for the most-sought screenings.

The box office number is (801) 322-1700 and hours are from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For a film guide, call (801) 322-1700 or write the Sundance Film Festival, P.O. Box 16450, Salt Lake City UT 84116.

After 34 years, world still turns for Fulton

John N. Goudas

Eileen Fulton

An ageless heroine

Eileen Fulton's theme song should be "I'm Still Here," Stephen Sondheim's ode to show business divas who have survived.

Eileen, known to millions of devoted fans as Lisa, the indomitable and ageless heroine on "As the World Turns," has been on the popular and long-running CBS soap for 34 years (give or take a couple of intervals when she quit and came back).

That is enough time to have earned a couple of gold watches at the very least. But what Eileen has earned is the undying devotion from the fans she respects and cherishes.

"I really love my fans. They have stuck with me (and Lisa) through the proverbial thick and thin. I am particularly happy with the current storyline involving the Italian business man, Eduardo, who is not only interested in me but is also preening around Lucinda. I hope this situation will escalate into a kind of war between Lucinda and Lisa, two strong-willed women."

Astute fans of "As the World Turns" have noted that Nicholas Coster, who plays Eduardo, played Lisa's second husband, John Eldridge, years and years ago. Some fans have found this interesting casting while others have objected. In any case, Eileen thinks it is fun because "Nick is such a wonderful actor to work with and it's been years since we first appeared together on the show."

Eileen's voice took on a sober note during our conversation when she spoke about Joseph Breen, who played her long-lost son Scott for a while. Breen announced he was HIV positive and, after a time, left the show (the writers sent him off to California). And like so many other peformers, Eileen has contributed her time and talent to AIDS benefits.

In addition to her role on "ATWT," Eileen is always fashioning a new nightclub cabaret act. She will unveil her latest, which she titled "Old Lost Loves — Yours, Mine and Lisa's," beginning Feb. 4 at New York City's Blue Room at The Supper Club with performances every Friday and Saturday night. In the past, Eileen's cabaret stints have proven very successful and her fans from the show make up a good part of the audience.

"I like to do songs that are a bit surprising. Most people who go to see cabaret performers are into love songs and other songs that strike a chord of recognition. There are so many good-loser love songs that it's difficult to make a selection from among them, but I think I've chosen some truly terrific songs."

More gossip

Q: I've heard that Ginger Rogers has a sense of humor about the great affection fans still have for her screen partnership with Fred Astaire. Is this true? — L.C.

Rogers

A: Yes. Recently, when the wheelchair-bound Rogers, now 82, was a guest at a meeting of her fans in the Midwest, a member of the audience asked her whether Astaire had ever stepped on her feet during their dance numbers. "If you mean, is the fact that I'm sitting in this wheelchair because Fred took a misstep, you're wrong!" quipped Ginger. She added that to this day she has absolutely no idea of the precise nature of the illness that has confined her to the wheelchair, explaining that, as a lifelong Christian Scientist, she's never consulted a doctor to find out.

Q: Does Arnold Schwarzenegger live near movieland or has he, like a number of actors, moved to some other state? — A.F.

A: Arnold lives in a Pacific Palisades mansion and has just purchased, for a cool $3 million, John Forsythe's house right next door. What is Schwarzenegger going to do with mansion number two? He plans to use it as a gatehouse or guest quarters.

A: You're right. There are plans underway to star Jon Lovitz in a '90s version of the classic film "Marty," for which Ernest Borgnine won an Academy Award in 1955. Other current remakes include "Maverick," starring Mel Gibson and the original TV Maverick, James Garner; "An Affair to Remember," retitled "Love Affair," starring Warren Beatty and Annette Bening; and "The Getaway," a remake of the 1972 Steve McQueen thriller, starring Kim Basinger and Alec Baldwin.

HOLLYWOOD TRANSPLANT: Comic Yakov Smirnoff has left his plush Los Angeles digs and moved to Branson, Mo., where he's building his own theater, as have numerous other stars — most of them country music artists — who've discovered that the town is a gold mine.

Q: What's happened to Boy George, the rock star in drag who made Culture Club a big-name act in the '80s? Is he still wearing those outrageous outfits? — M.R.

George

A: A toned-down Boy George is these days attempting something of a comeback. He's long since beaten a nasty heroin addiction, and is flogging his old musical group in a new album titled, "At Worst: The Best of Boy George and Culture Club." He's also toned down his dressing in drag, but still wears some makeup — a habit since the age of 16. We'll hear lots more of Boy George when his autobiography, "Take It Like a Man," is published. It promises to be extremely candid.

Q: I understand actress Rosie Perez actually began her career as a singer. Will she resume her singing now that she's likely to become a major movie star? — A.B.

A: True, Perez was once offered a record deal, but she doesn't consider herself a singer. Instead, Perez has been very successful as a choreographer, for which she received two Emmy nominations for her Fly Girl routines on "In Living Color." Perez also choreographed music videos for such diverse performers as Bobby Brown, Diana Ross and LL Cool J. Perez seems a shoo-in for an Academy Award nomination for her work in "Fearless," in which she stars with Jeff Bridges. She'll soon be seen in "Cop Tips Waitress $2 Mil," with Nicolas Cage and Bridget Fonda.
